CHARTER OAK RANGES

OPINION OF AN EXPERT.

"My deliberate judgment is that the oven of the Range, as compared with others, is not only more equally heated in every part—front as well as rear but as a result of its superior ventilation the food placed therein is better cooked, while retaining a sweeter flavor, and a larger proportion of its best juices. I have found, also, that the consumption of fuel in this Range for a given amount of work is much less than any other."

GRANT AND HALLECK.

GEN. LEW WALLACE'S DENIAL OF GEN. BOYNTON'S STATEMENTS.

The Suspension of Wallace by Halleck—His Reinstatement by Gen. Grant—Halleck's Alleged Jealousy of Grant—Gen. Wallace's Statement of Facts.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, January 20.—Gen. Lew Wallace in an interview in the Commercial-Gazette, having said that Gen. Halleck was envious of Gen. Grant, and would have been willing to allow Washington to have fallen into Lee's hands in order to crush Grant, Gen. Boynton replied in his Washington correspondence, quoting from records tending to disprove Gen. Wallace's assertion. Another interview with Gen. Wallace appears to-day, in which he cites Halleck's treatment of Gen. Grant after the battle of Donelson, and again after the battle of Shiloh, to show that Halleck had a deep feeling against Grant, and that when the tables were turned and Grant was commander of all the armies, and Halleck only Chief of Staff, with close relations with President Lincoln and Secretary Stanton, Gen. Halleck would be in a position to use his power to Grant's injury. He then goes on to show how this was done by saying that Halleck did not notify Grant of the coming of Early; that he (Wallace) personally ordered the reconnoisance which discovered Early's intentions; that Gen. Ricketts, who, as Boynton said, was sent by Grant, through Halleck's suggestion, to meet Early, was ordered to Harper's Ferry to relieve Sigel, and, upon learning from Wallace of the approach of Early, put himself under Wallace's orders and with him fought the battle of Monocacy.

WALLACE GOES INTO DETAILS.

"This," he says, "will serve to show several important facts: First, Gen. Ricketts was not sent to report to me, or in the way of reinforcements; second, that I had no knowledge of his coming until his advance was stopped by my guards at the bridge, and that he in fact was not sent to me, but to Harper's Ferry. If Halleck believed that Sigel and I were to be attacked, why send but one division of not to exceed 5,000 men to meet an enemy reported at 30,000 veterans, unless it was to make a show of resistance to the capture of Washington? Rickett's force, with maue, was sufficient to meet a raiding party and that was all. The battle of Manocacy took place on the 9th of July. As I was following my troops off the field in retreat about half after 5 o'clock in the evening, I stopped and dictated a telegram, directed to Gen. Halleck, informing him of the events of the day; that I was in retreat; that in my judgment there were about 18,000 men who had been fighting us and that there was still a large body to be seen behind them, in the vicinity of Frederick City; that the enemy had been contending for the Washington pike. I concluded with the remark that it would require all his energies

TO SAVE WASHINGTON.

I also sent a dispatch by the same messenger to either Gen. Grant or Secretary Stanton. My recollection is it was sent to Grant. While Gen. Ricketts and myself were lying in a fence corner trying to get some sleep, about midnight of the battle, we were awakened by a messenger with a telegram from Halleck directed to me. I read it, my recollection is, by the light of burning matches. It informed me, as I now remember, among other things, that I was removed from the command of the department, and that Gen. Ord had been sent down to relieve me. This order was not from Gen. Grant, but from Gen. Halleck. Within a few days after being thus relieved I received an order from Gen. Grant at City Point, restoring me to the command and informing me that Gen. Ord had been instructed to report at Washington and wait for orders. Of course those orders were obeyed. Gen. Ord went to Washington and I resumed command. By mail I received a private note from Gen. Grant, inviting me, when my department was clear of the rebels, to visit him for a couple of weeks at City Point, bringing my horse with me, which I did, spending a couple of weeks very pleasantly as his guest, riding with him and observing the operations

IN FRONT OF PETERSBURG.

The point of all this I stop now to make. Gen. Boynton says it was Gen. Grant, and not Gen. Halleck, who removed me. If the records should substantiate Gen. Boynton's statement, it will remain a mystery to me forever why Gen. Grant should have restored me so soon to the same command, and followed it by an invitation which was his first friendly unofficial communication, verbally or in writing to me, after the battle of Shiloh. The removal was a mark of disapprobation in the severest form. The restoration was an unmistakable commendation, strengthened still further by the private note of invitation. What was there to disapprove, except that by the battle the enemy's operation and movements had been interrupted?

Gen. Wallace goes on to say that in the midst of the engagement of McCook's command in the defense of Washington with the enemy Halleck permitted President Lincoln to ride out in his carriage showing that the President had no knowledge of the great danger overhanging the Capital. He makes the point, too, that Gen. Grant, when really notified of the danger to Washington; did not stop with sending a single division, but hurried forward the greater portion of the two army corps. Gen. Wallace closes by saying: "In my judgment there are but two alternatives which present themselves under all the circumstances of the case as they appear to me. One is that Gen. Halleck was an imbecile; the other, that he was allowing his jealousy to lead him down to the serious injury of his country."

TO SEE WHAT WAS GOING ON,

FATHER FAILED TO COME.

Marshal Schirmer's Charges—Bounced by High-Toned Colored Society.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., January 20.—Major J. M. Clark, president of the First National Bank of this city, and wife left on the afternoon train for a trip to Cuba and the West Indies.

Yesterday afternoon Marshal Schirmer picked up two children at the depot, a boy and girl, aged respectively 11 and 9 years. They stated that their father, James Harris, is a widower and lives in Ashland, Boone County; that have been living with an uncle, Thomas Johnson, of Cedar County, who, at the father's request, put them on the train at Schell City with tickets to this point, where the father was to meet them. They arrived on time yesterday, but up to noon to-day the father has not put in appearence. The Marshal is caring for them at the city's expense.

William Diggs, a student of Lincoln Institute, and a waiter at Howard Barnes' restaurant, was waited on by a committee of the colored elite of the city and notified to leave within twenty-four hours, which he cheerfully accepted, leaving on the first train. Diggs was proven before the committee of being guilty of a nameless crime and also of petit thelving. He came here from Boonville and moved in the upper circles of colored society.

Death of Mrs. McBride.

Susan A. McBride, wife of the late Hon. Jos. H. McBride, who served in the City Council in 1860 and '61, died this morning at the family residence, corner of Burd and Easton avenue, at the age of 60 years. Mrs. McBride was born and raised in St. Louis, and was very well known. Her son, Dean McBride, is well known in the city. The funeral takes place Friday afternoon from the family residence to Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Attempted Suicide.

LOUISVILLE, KY., January 20.—C. C. Vernon, the 17-year old son of Dr. Vernon, a wealthy citizen of Dyersburg, Tenn., attempted suicide this morning at Alexander's hotel, by shooting himself in the left breast. The wound is fatal. The boy refuses to give any reason for his act, only saying he intended to kill himself.

FREEZING RAIN.

A Condition that Renders the Sidewalks Slippery for Pedestrians.

A little group was gathered around the Chief Observer in the Signal office this morning waiting impatiently to see him finish his weather map for the day. Their anxiety was but natural, as they missed their little pet of a cold wave announced to come last night, and not only wanted to find out where the poor little thing had gone, but also why their trouble in flying the flag had been for nothing. When the map had been drawn the situation very clearly showed that the wave won't trouble this locality for some time, but it gave no explanation of how the atmospheric metamorphosis came about. Sergeant Weber, however, scratched his head, gazed with a puzzled look at the map and then said: "It beats the world how we missed that cold wave." Since yesterday morning it appears that the high barometer area central at Omaha has moved clear down East to Washington in some marvelous way, getting past St. Louis without sensibly affecting the mercury.

The real cause of the sudden change probably lies in the fact that yesterday evening a low barometer area began to develop in Eastern Colorado and Northern Texas. Then as the high area passed toward St. Louis on its eastward journey, the influence of the low barometer, or "light air" area being felt, the air rushed toward the point of depression and, as a result, the wind changed to the northeast. This theory is borne out by the fact that last evening about 5 o'clock, just when the cold wave should have begun to make itself felt, the wind at this city, which had been blowing from the West all day, suddenly shifted to the northeast, making the air at once moist and suggestive of rain. The lowest figure reached by the Signal Service thermometer yesterday and last night was 13 deg. above. The changing of the direction of the wind at once had a warming effect upon the air until at 9 a. m. to-day a brisk rain set in that froze as it fell, making the sidewalks a mass of ice and bringing the proudest to the ground. This freezing of the rain gave a very good illustration of the earth's radiation of cold, and showed why it is that a thermometer on the ground reads lower than one above. While the air to-day was above the freezing point the ground and the wood and iron pillars in front of stores were coated with a thin crust. The storm center that had developed west of here this morning will probably not let this region escape without a further disturbance of the elements.

Florida's Cold Snap.

CHICAGO, January 20.—A correspondent writing from Jacksonville, Fla., respecting the severe weather, says the morning of January 10 opened cold and clear and the mercury went down to 21 deg., while on the morning of the 12th it registered 15.6, the lowest temperature ever recorded, except in January, 1835, when the mercury fell to 11 deg., so say the ancient inhabitants. In January, 1850, the thermometer registered 16 deg. above zero when the oranges were frozen and all of the young orange trees were killed. The injury to the present crop of oranges cannot as yet be estimated, but the probability is that it will be between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000, and it is supposed that all of the young trees are killed.

The first warning was received in time to give the owners of the groves an opportunity to pick their fruit, and in many cases it was heeded, but there are many people who do not believe Hazen's predictions any more than the people in the olden times believed in Noah's warnings, so the frost took the foolish ones by surprise, as the flood did the scoffers. At Punta Rassa the thermometer registered at 27 deg., and reports reached here of frozen fish being washed ashore on the island. The steamer Athlete arrived in Jacksonville on Tuesday from the Halifax River country with 800 boxes of oranges that were picked before the frost. The captain of the Athlete reports everything frozen in that section of the country. At Fernandina, Pensacola, Gainesville, Sanford, St. Augustine, Orlando, Tampa, Key West and Cedar Keys the thermometer ranged from 15 to 22 deg., and a slight frost is reported in Cuba. Owing to the unnaturally cold weather, all of the Jacksonville schools were suspended. The suffering among the colored people throughout the Southern States has been intense, for perforated cabins with but one fire-place are not much protection from the bitter cold.

Rail and River.

The Wabash from the West was three hours and ten minutes late, and the Missouri Pacific No. 4 was forty minutes late; all other trains on time.

The river remains unchanged, no perceptible rise or fall being recorded. No effort will be made as yet to blast the ice.

SLAUGHTER OF STOCK.

A Passenger Train Runs Down a Drove of Horses—Big Loss.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

DECATUR, ILL., January 22.—Six miles west of Decatur, last night, the Peoria, Decatur and Evansville passenger train ran into a lot of horses belonging to John S. Childs and killed twelve outright, crippling another, three escaping. The rush was made by the engineer to avoid a wreck, and the train held the track, averting loss of human life. The dead horses were worth $1,800. The company will pay the bill.

The Firemen's Ball.

Jake C. Ewald, ex-President of the Merchants' Exchange, says he will not only be at the ball with his family but will send in his check for $25 or more in a few days.

A donation of $20 was handed a POST-DISPATCH reporter for the fund this morning as "Cash."

Chief Lindsay received a letter this morning with a check for $200 in aid of the fund, from a party not residing in this city, but owning large interests here, with the express understanding that names should not be given. The Chief says that all parties wishing to contribute or donate anything to the fund will find their wishes strictly complied with in every respect.

CHIN'S CHIN.

IT BECOMES GREATLY FATIGUED DURING THE CROSS-EXAMINATION TO-DAY.

He Protests Against the Reiteration of the Same Question—His Elastic Religious Principles—The Conspiracy at Joe Gong's—The Court Proceedings in the Chinese Murder Trial.

During the afternoon session of the Criminal Court yesterday, counsel engaged in defending Chyo Chiagck, one of the alleged murderers of Lou Johnson, began their cross-examination of Lee Chin, the laundryman whose direct examination was reported in yesterday's POST-DISPATCH. The attempt was made to confuse him in dates, but he showed himself very familiar with the American system of chronology. Judge Laughlin and Mr. Fauntleroy both protested against Wong Chin Foo acting as interpreter, on the ground of incompetency, but the Court decided that that question must be settled later. The same witness was placed on the stand at 10:15 this morning, when the cross-examination was resumed. He said he remembered that the meeting at which the assassination was discussed was two weeks before the murder. Witness said that on the night of the murder Baptiste called on him and told him that he was going to New York. Then he told witness, without going into particulars about the discovery, that Johnson had been murdered and asked witness who did it. Witness said that he knew something about the other side. He was not instructed by Baptiste, who did not tell him that the time had come to down the other side. Baptiste sent a strange Chinaman to him at his laundry about midnight in June 1, the day that Johnson was killed. He had known Baptiste by sight for some time; how long he could not remember. He had let Johnson know about the reward for his life and Johnson told Baptiste; therefore Baptiste sent for him to ask him about it. Baptiste had not told him that he should swear against these men. He told the same story before the Coroner as he was telling in court, and had not seen the defendants since.

The defense then veered around to the question of the second meeting at Joe Gong's place. Here Lee Chin created a ripple of laughter by informing the Court through the interpreter that he was tired of over and over again, and did not see the sense of it.

The Court said he would have to answer the questions.

He was then asked the names of those present. He announced Joe Gong, Pock Sig, Ah Mun, Chyo Pock, Hock Slack, You Sing and Chyo Chiagck. The conversation with him began before all these were present. Chyo Chiagck came in a few moments later.

Governor Johnson and the counsel for the State here became involved in a lively wrangle over the questions which were being put to the witness.

Witness then repeated his conversation with Joe Gong, to the effect that he would pay to have Lou Johnson killed. "Just then Pock Sig, Hock Slack and Chyo Chiagck came in and asked what we were talking about, and were told." Witness heard Chyo Chiagck say: "All right, we will do that ourselves."

When asked regarding what he testified before the Coroner's inquest the unfortunate man answered, "You ask me so many questions that I am dizzy." In order to reduce him to a condition of vertigo Mr. Fountleroy then asked a question containing about ten distinct propositions, but the witness fell back on his resources of patience and gave an intelligent answer. He did not remember stating at the Coroner's inquest that Chyo Pock was not at Joe Gong's the night that the reward was offered for Johnson's assassination.

Judge Laughlin took up the cross-examination and asked the witness:

"Have you ever been in trouble with the courts?"

Mr. Clover objected, and the Court suggested that there might be several with courts, probably having an idea in the direction of fines for contempt.

The questions "Have you ever been arrested?" and "Have you ever been in the hands of the police?" and "Have you ever been in prison?" were objected to and objection sustained, Mr. Clover suggesting that the prisoner's friend, Ah Lung, was more familiar with such subjects than the witness. Witness said he did not belong to the Ye Hing Society.

"What society do you pay for protection?" asked Judge Laughlin.

"None at all," the witness answered.

"Whom do you pay for protection against raids?"

"What protection is there? If I have money I fight. If I have no money I don't fight." [Laughter].

"How many times have you found that out?"

Objected to and objection sustained.

Witness said he did not tell Baptiste whom he meant when he mentioned "the other party," as Baptiste knew more about it than he did. He had not been told of Johnson's death before he met Baptiste at the grocery store at about 12 o'clock the Monday night that the killing was discovered. Witness told Lou Johnson about the reward offered for his assassination about two or three weeks before the murder. Witness acknowledged that he hit the pipe at Joe Gong's that evening, but did not become intoxicated. He smoked at other places and had a pipe of his own.

Mr. Clover objected to the cross-examination unless the defense showed what they were driving at.

Mr. Laughlin said that he proposed to show that the witness visited the opium den and house of prostitution kept by Ah Mung. He proposed to do so for the purpose of showing witness' moral character.

Witness said he had visited Ah Mung's place but very seldom. He had never met women there. The Coroner's record was produced, and the witness recognized the signature attached to his name as having been written there at his request by another Chinaman, he being disabled at the time.

"Do you know the meaning of an oath?" Judge Laughlin asked.

"It means you must tell the truth."

"Do you know what the punishment is if you don't tell the truth?"

"I don't know what it is here, but in China it is death."

"What do you understand to be

THE MOST BINDING OATH

on a man?"

"The only binding oath I know is by the supreme God in heaven, remembering that there is a supreme devil below. I never saw an oath administered in China."

"What form of religion do you believe in?"

"In China I believe the Chinese religion; now I am in America I believe the American religion." [Laughter.]

Witness said he knew Cong Seng casually, having met him at Joe Gong's. He sold wax flowers whenever he could and lived round among his fellow countrymen when he got the chance.

The re-direct examination was opened by Governor Johnson, but nothing interesting was developed up to 1 p. m., when a recess of an hour was taken.

MILTON WESTON.

A Strong Effort to Save the Chicago Millionaire From the Penitentiary.

PHILADELPHIA, January 20.—Charles H. Reed of New York this morning presented to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania a printed brief petitioning for a rehearing and reargument in the case of Milton Weston, now under sentence of five years' imprisonment for voluntary manslaughter. The sentence was pronounced by the Allegheny County Court, and was sustained by the Supreme Court after an argument for a new trial. The latter court, however, granted a stay of proceedings until the 26th inst., to allow of the filing and consideration of the above mentioned brief and petition.

Carondelet.

Council No. 9, K. of F. M., will give their third annual ball this evening at St. Boniface's Hall.

Mr. John Krauss donated a quantity of bread this morning for the Carondelet poor.

With the aid of dynamite cartridges the Missouri Pacific Transfer Company and the steam tug Rhea have succeeded in opening the river nearly half way across. The transfer boat Pacific reports the ice where it is stuck in East Carondelet the thickest known for years.

Deputy Marshal Lobsinger, who, it will be remembered, was attacked with a paralytic stroke last week, is able to move around and will, in a few days, be able to attend to his business.

THE MUSICAL UNION.

Dress Rehearsal of the Programme for To-Morrow Night at Music Hall.

About 600 people, two-thirds of whom were ladies, gathered in Music Hall this morning to hear the full-dress rehearsal by the St. Louis Musical Union of the programme they will render to-morrow evening. The orchestra of fifty-six pieces was out in full force, and despite the gloomy and depressing nature of the weather, entered with spirit into the performances, which were lead by Mr. A. Waldawer, as conductor. The audience, although not very enthusiastic over the orchestral numbers, was not stinted in the applause it bestowed upon each effort. The soloists, Mr. S. E. Jacobsohn on the violin, and Miss Fannie Bloomfield on the piano, were, however, very warmly received and their merits quickly recognized. The former has been for years leading violinist with Theodore Thomas, and a pupil of the celebrated David, is a faithful representative of the old Spohr school. In his playing to-day he revealed his forte, which lies in his great tones. Miss Bloomfield has just returned to Chicago after five years of training in Vienna, where she was the scholar of Leschetsky. She appeared with great success at the recent National Musical Convention in New York, where she was brought into comparison with all the leading pianists of America. In touch she is masculine and is possessed of great force. Her brilliant execution to-day created a very favorable impression.

The following is the programme to be given to-morrow evening:

1. Overture—"Euryanthe" .... Weber
   Orchestra.
2. Concerto F minor for piano .... Hensel
   Miss Fannie Bloomfield.
3. Adagio and Canzonetto for violin .... Godard
   Mr. S. E. Jacobsohn.
4. Overture—"Robespierre" .... Litolff
   Orchestra.
5. Andante and Polonaise, E flat, piano solo .. Chopin
   Miss Fannie Bloomfield.
6. Danse Russe .... W. Goldner
   Orchestra.
7. Adagio and finale from First Concerto .... Bruch
   Mr. S. E. Jacobsohn.
8. Sylvia—"Ballet" .... Delibes
   (a) Prelude Les Chasseresses.
   (b) Intermezzo et Valse Lente.
   (c) Pizzicati.
   (d) Cortege de Bacchus.
   Orchestra.

WILL BURST THE POOL.

A Meeting of Transporters on 'Change To-Day.

A meeting of the Merchants' Exchange Transportation Committee of the representatives of the Boards of Trade of St. Joseph, Kansas City and Leavenworth was held in the reading-room of the Merchant's Exchange at 2 o'clock this afternoon, for the purpose of discussing a proposition to be submitted to the Southwestern Railroad pool for the adjustment of freight rates between Missouri River and Mississippi River points. Previous to the regular meeting the local committee tendered the visiting delegates an informal dinner in the directors' room of the Exchange. There were present Messrs. Latshaws, Mead, Kilpatrick and Tredway of Kansas City; E. B. Daniels and S. S. Perry of St. Joseph; General Harding, Railroad Commissioner, and Mayor D. R. Francis, President Seth Cobb of the Merchant's Exchange; H. Haarstick, E. O. Stanard, D. P. Grier, Phil Shirmer, Alex Smith, Edward T. Kelley, Dwight Tredway and E. C. Simmons.

After the dinner was over and the gentlemen had lit their cigars, President Cobb called them to order and laid before them the business of the meeting. The question of rates was discussed in all its bearings, and it was finally decided that all rates should be made upon a basis of mileage and should be the same for Kansas City and St. Louis as for Chicago, in proportion to the distance between the shipping points. At a meeting to be held this evening delegates will be appointed to go to Chicago and confer with the pool representatives.

A SQUARE BACK-DOWN.

THE REPUBLICAN SENATORS MODIFY THEIR DEMANDS FOR INFORMATION.

A Republican Back-Down.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20.—The Republican Senators have receded one step from the demands which they have been making. Senator Morrill, the Chairman of the Finance Committee, has become convinced that he has exceeded the powers of the Senate in seeking to obtain reasons for removals or suspensions. He modified his original letter yesterday which he had addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury, so that it simply calls for the papers in the case. There was quite a discussion in the committee. This back-down of the Republicans in the Finance Committee will doubtless be followed by similar retrograde movements in the other committees. The majority of the Republican Senators believe that they have no right to call upon the President to give reasons for any appointment. But undoubtedly there will be unity among them in asking for the papers in each case. Yesterday evening a caucus of Democratic Senators was held, lasting from 3 to 6 o'clock, to hear the report of a committee consisting of Senators Vest, Maxey and Harris, appointed last Friday to confer with the President and members of his Cabinet. Senator Vest said that they had presented several aspects of the case to the President. Mr. Cleveland, after listening to their report and suggestions, said that he had not yet made up his mind as to what position he would take. He wanted further time to consider this question. It was expected that the matter would be taken up and determined at the Cabinet meeting yesterday, but owing to absence of Mr. Bayard there was no regular Cabinet meeting held. The same member of this Committee had a number of conferences with the Cabinet officers from whom information has been sought. There were a number of divergent expressions by members of the caucus. Nearly all of the thirty Senators present gave their views. Senator Eustis is the only one of the Democratic Senators who is not inclined to say in advance what he will do. He will be on the skirmish line. The Democratic Senators will sustain the President if he declines to furnish information. In the event of Senator Edmunds introducing a specific resolution calling for information, it is believed by those who are familiar with the President's method that he will be willing to have his Cabinet officers exhibit the papers. This will be positively determined at next Thursday's Cabinet meeting.

Greedy Geddes.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20.—There is a good-sized row in the House Committee on War Claims, of which George A. Geddes of Ohio is chairman. The committees are supposed to elect their own clerks, but usually the chairman makes the appointment. Mr. Geddes ousted the committee clerk to make room for his son, and was going to force out the assistant clerk to make room for another Ohio man, when the Committee objected. The case is likely to come before the House. The clerkships pay at the rate of $2,200 and $1,600 respectively.

Postmaster Hyde's Case.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20.—The case of Colonel Hyde has not as yet been considered by the sub-committee of one having it in charge. Among other complaints filed with the committee is one from ex-Postmaster Wells in the shape of a protest against his removal, contained in a type document, legal cap size, half an inch thick. Other complaints charge Mr. Hyde with violation of the civil-service laws. The case will likely not come up for a week.

Unissued National Bank Notes.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20.—The Secretary of the Treasury has appointed a committee to make an actual count of the unissued National Bank notes contained in the vault of the United States Treasury, amounting to about $75,000,000.

The receptions at the houses of the Cabinet will not be held to-day, so the afternoon will be the quietest of the week.

Mrs. Carlisle also omits her reception to-day, as a mark of respect to Miss Bayard's memory.

It is about settled that Civil Service Commissioner Eaton is to retire February 1 or some time during the month. He has had several consultations with the President recently. His main reason for retiring is the opposition his confirmation met with in the Senate.

The State Department has been officially notified that Mr. Del Campo, is no longer connected with the Chilian Legation.

Free Seeds.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20.—The announcement that the Congressmen's annual supply of seeds is ready for distribution has already brought a deluge of requests from the West. John J. O'Neill's can hardly be called an agricultural district, yet he comes in for his share of the agricultural reward. He had requests yesterday for cauliflower seed and balsam.

The Coinage Committee.

WASHINGTON, January 20.—The House Committee on Coinage to-day postponed until the next meeting the consideration of all bills relating to coinage of the silver dollar. The committee will then begin the discussion of the different phases and dispose of them as rapidly as the importance of the question will allow. It was the general understanding of the committee that the bill introduced by Chairman Bland to repeal that portion of the act of Juue 9, 1879, providing for the exchange and redemption of subsidiary coins for lawful money, should be reported favorably. Final action on the bill, however, was not taken as the committee thought it might lead to the premature opening up of the silver question in the House. All bills relating to trade dollars were referred to a sub-committee, consisting of Lanham, McCreary and James, after which an adjournment was taken.

An Adverse Report.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20.—The House Committee on Reform in the Civil Service today, unanimously instructed Representative Pulitzer to report adversely a bill introduced by Representative Seney of Ohio, for the repeal of the Civil Service law. A sub-committee, consisting of Representatives Clements, Pulitzer and Spooner of Rhode Island, was appointed to consider all bills relating to the repeal of the tenure of office act.

Galennie's Regret.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20.—Discussing the National Board of Trade, which is in session here to-day, Frank Galennie last night expressed great regret that the St. Louis Merchants' Exchange did not follow out its intention of rejoining three years ago. The National Board of Trade has become quite a power in national politics. It is behind the Lowell bankruptcy bill, which passed the Senate last session, and which will, doubtless, pass both Houses this year.

"I come on here or someone else comes on here, representing the Merchants' Exchange," said Mr. Galennie, "and we speak before a committee or two and go away, and in three days we are forgotten. The National Board of Trade is constantly at work. It has its agent in Congress and it makes its power felt. The only pretext the St. Louis Exchange could have had for not joining three years ago, after I visited Kansas City, was the expense. We have a large membership and our assessments would be in proportion to our membership, but we would have a corresponding representation. I think we would be entitled to forty delegates. It would have cost the Merchants' Exchange perhaps $15 a year but the advantages we would derive are out of proportion to the amount of money we would have to spend. It would be a splendid thing if we could obtain the indorsement of the National Board of Trade for the Mississippi River improvement, but we cannot as long as we have no representation in it."

Mr. Galennie addressed the Judiciary Committee of the House yesterday in support of the bankruptcy bill.

Approved by the President.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20.—The President has approved the act authorizing the issue of duplicate certificates of deposit to the People's National Bank of Lawrenceburg, Ind.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

National Board of Trade.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20.—The sixteenth annual meeting of the National Board of Trade was commenced in this city at noon today. Mr. Frederick Trowley of Philadelphia, presided. The roll call disclosed the presence of forty-five delegates, representing the leading trade organizations of the country.

FORTY-NINTH CONGRESS.

The Senate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20.—On the opening of the Senate to-day Mr. Hale offered the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to forward to the Senate all papers in relation to the contract let to Brainerd & Co., or to other parties, for the work or any part of the same of putting an additional story on the Peeria, Ill., Post Office in 1885; also all protests filed by labor leagues in relation thereto; also a copy of the protest filed by Messrs. Straub & Co. of Buffalo, N. Y., giving information that the work of said contract would be performed by convict labor and that consequently the contractors who employed free labor could not afford to compete for the work."

In offering the resolution, Mr. Hale said he was not prepared to believe, without further information, that the Secretary of the Treasury would let any contract for work to be done on public buildings in such way that the work would be performed by convict labor. He had received information of such a character as made it desirable to ascertain the facts in the case set forth in his resolution. He did not believe that contracts for public work should be let to the employers of convict labor, when there was no lack of ordinary labor of the country. He did not believe that free labor should be put in competition with convict labor. The resolution was agreed to.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Mitchell of Oregon, for reference to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and was so referred, calling on the Secretary of State for copies of all correspondence between the United States Government and the Chinese Government since the promulgation of our treaty with China, having reference to the enforcement of the treaty provision.

The resolution to pay the expenses of Judge Underwood of Virginia, in contesting a seat in the Senate, which resolution has lain over since the special session of the Senate, was laid before the Senate, and on objection by Mr. Allison to its present consideration, it went over.

Mr. Morrill addressed the Senate on the silver question. He premised with the remark that the elaborate speech of the Senator from Kentucky, Mr. Beck, seemed to throw the burden of rejoinder on the friends of the Administration.

"I do not mean," he continued, "to encroach upon the privileges which so many Democratic Senators appear eager to enjoy, of coming to the rescue of the President and Secretary of the Treasury against the rather cruel attack made on a cardinal measure of the Administration, as I know the fate of those who venture to interfere with family quarrels. But this measure through which silver might be maintained on a par with gold, so worthy of acceptation, I fear will not have, after the hot demonstration of the recognized leader of his party in the Senate against it, that unanimous support to which it may be fairly entitled. In the first place, let me say that there are no parties, so far as I know, in the Senate or out of it, that propose, or have any wish, to demonetize silver; to charge otherwise is a baseless assumption and unworthy of the arena of fair debate. Everybody is willing, nay anxious, to keep as much of silver in circulation as can be done, and keep it at the same time at par with our gold coinage. The only hostility to silver arises from what seems to be a fixed purpose on the part of some of its advocates to promote such an excess of silver coinage as will drive gold out of the country and leave our vast trade based upon silver only. In reaching this position of silver monometallism it is impossible to be blind to the disastrous contraction of the circulating medium of the country that would at once occur, for when the moment arrives that gold commands a premium, it will be held as a commodity for sale, not for circulation. A small, or a 5 per cent premium being as productive of universal hoarding as 25 per cent, no possible advantage to our people could be expected from following the lame and feeble example of India or Mexico in utilizing a silver currency only." Mr. Morrill insisted there was no war upon silver, but that in substance and effect a delaration of war had been made on gold by the leaders of the Democratic party in the Senate. From the pleasure which the Senator from Kentucky had evinced in delivering in the Senate his antagonism to the President and Secretary of the Treasury, it seemed to Mr. Morrill that that Senator had been, for the moment, under the delusion that he was still belaboring, with left-handed compliments, some Republican President and Secretary, but Mr. Morrill could look on with composure, confident of the "survival of the fittest." His (Mr. Morrill's) conviction, that continued coinage of large amounts of silver would drive all the gold out of the country, was based on the past experience of all civilized people that the inferior money never failed to expel the superior, and on the fact that that our own silver mines furnished more than one-half the annual silver yield in the world.

THE IRISH QUESTION.

GLADSTONE DECLARES THE GOVERNMENT MUST TAKE THE INITIATIVE.

Extraordinary Arrangements for the Formal Opening of Parliament by the Queen—Arrival of the Queen in London—Terrorism in Ireland—Execution of the Murderer Sheehan

Special Cablegram to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, January 20.—Mr. Gladstone's letter to the Mayor of Belfast contains statements sent to you as his views, in almost the same words. It is interpreted by every one to mean, as before, simply that the Government must take the initiative. He will propose nothing.

THE FORMAL OPENING OF PARLIAMENT.

Extraordinary arrangements are being made for to-morrow's meeting of Parliament and the Queen's presence. Barricades have been placed in the streets, awnings, red carpeting and all the features of a grand state pageant are visible. Long and detailed police orders have been issued. Nobody will be allowed to pass freely about the streets except with the blue pass given to the press messengers. A special order forbids the use of opera glasses in the House of Lords. There is intense public interest in the ceremonials.

England.

TERRORISM IN IRELAND.

LONDON, January 20.—The deputation of Loyalists from Ulster to-day waited on the Marquis of Hartington, War Secretary under Mr. Gladstone. They pointed out that in Ireland the legal power of the Queen's writ does not run outside of Ulster, and said they feared that the terrorism existing in the south and west of Ireland would extend to Ulster unless it was checked. Lord Hartington replied that in a few hours they would know the intentions of the Government respecting the Irish question, and that until then he would refrain from defining his policy regarding the matter. The Marquis advised the deputation to do their utmost to enlist the sympathy of the English people in their cause.

THE QUEEN IN LONDON.

The Queen arrived in London to-day from Windsor Castle. She drove from the railway station to Buckingham Palace in an open carriage and received an ovation over the road. Her Majesty, who is in excellent health, will open Parliament in person to-morrow.

THE MERSEY TUNNEL OPENED.

LIVERPOOL, January 20.—The tunnel between Liverpool and Berkenhead, under the Mersey, was formally opened to-day by the Prince of Wales and his two sons, Princes Albert and George. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, a heavy fog prevailing and snow falling, there were large crowds present both at Berkenhead and Liverpool. At the Central Station, Berkenhead, His Royal Highness was presented with an address by the inhabitants of that city. The Mersey Tunnel Railway Company had provided accommodations for a great number of persons within the station, and the entire space was filled with prominent people. All the prominent buildings in Liverpool were handsomely decorated with flags and bunting. A loyal address was also presented to the Prince of Wales by the municipal officers of Liverpool. The royal party entered a special train at Rock Ferry on the joint railways between Chester and Berkenhead, and proceeded through the tunnel, the party meeting with ovations at all points along the line.

He responded feebly to the prayers of the priest, and was trembling violently when placed under the gallows. He died almost instantly, his neck being broken by the fall.

COMPLIMENTARY TO MISS MASON.

A Reception Given, Last Night at Mrs. Maffitt's Residence.

A reception was given last night by Mrs. Maffitt, complimentary to Miss Mason of Virginia. The large halls and saloons seemed transformed into a conservatory, with groups of tropical plants, interspersed with graceful designs of cut flowers. The walls were wainscoated with evergreens and the delicate traceries of the lace curtains were outlined with delicate vines or ferns; the stairway and chandeliers were wreathed with smilax, and over the mantel-pieces and on the tables were great baskets of flowers, which were distributed to the guests. Concealed by an improvised bower of evergreens, Spiering's orchestra rendered its choicest selections of music. Over two hundred invitations were issued, and most of the invited guests were in attendance in their most elegant toilets. Among them were to be found representatives from most of the old French families of the city, who have always been considered leaders in society.

Mrs. Maffitt received her guests in a toilet black gros-grain, en traine with crepe lisse rusches at the throat; no ornaments.

A band of velvet the same shade as the dress was clasped at the throat by a diamond aigrette. Coiffure high and diamond solitaires completed her toilet.

Miss Eliza Curtis wore black Lyons velvet with long court train, and trimmings of black chantilly lace, diamonds.

Miss Mimi Flanagan wore a toilet of pink satin duchess made short, and combined with deep flounces of point duchess, corsage decollete and sleeveless, a band of ribbon at the throat.

MAYOR BOWMAN'S WILL.

A Daughter of the Assassinated East St. Louisan Wants It Produced.

Mr. Charles P. Wise of Alton, attorney for Miss Minnie S. Bowman of Minneapolis, a daughter of the late ex-Mayor John B. Bowman of East St. Louis, filed a petition in the Probate Court to-day asking for a citation against her brother, Mr. Frank B. Bowman, and the widow of the deceased commanding them to appear in court and give reasons why they should not be attached for failing to produce her father's will. The petition states that it is the presumption that there is a will in existence. Miss Bowman further states in her petition that her brother, who has been appointed administrator of the estate, informed her at one time that their father had made a will and that it was in the possession of her step-mother. She also states that her father before his death had told her that he had made a will. In view of these facts, she thinks she has every reason to believe the will is still in existence, unless it has been destroyed since his death.

Miss Minnie Bowman, the petitioner, is a nun in a Catholic convent near Minneapolis. She is the youngest daughter of ex-Mayor Bowman, and though she went into the convent much against her father's wishes, it is said he thought more of her than of any of his other children. After the sensation of Mr. Bowman's assassination had died out there was a great deal of talk about the existence of the will, but though all the deceased effects were searced, no will was found. It was a great surprise to the community that Mr. Bowman, being a lawyer, and, it is also claimed, being in dread of meeting with a violent death at the hands of some of his enemies, had made no disposition of his property, but when a month elapsed and no will was found it wa the general opinion that he himself had destroyed the document which he was known to have made about seven years ago, and neglected to make out a new one. Miss Bowman in her petition says that she has good reasons to believe a will was left by her father, and if there was, she wants it executed. She claims not to know the contents of any will which her father made, but from the manner in which she reiterates throughout the petition that she is morally certain that he left a will, one cannot help drawing the inference that she knows more than is stated in the petition. In conformity with the prayer of the petition, citations were issued against Frank B. Bowman and his step-mother, Mrs. John B. Bowman, made returnable on February 1, at which time the matter will be heard by the Court. Miss Bowman, it is understood, will not leave the convent, but will be represented by Mr. Wise, her attorney. Miss Bowman has been in the Catholic Convent at Minneapolis for several years, and did not come down to her father's funeral, as it is against the rules of the order for any nun to leave the convent. She has, however, been visited by her brother Frank since the assassination of their father.

AN EX-OFFICER'S DESPAIR.

Suspected Sad Result of a Dismissal from the Police Force.

Quite a little excitement was caused at the Four Courts this afternoon by the arrival at the Central Station of Mrs. John Ready, wife of Officer John Ready, who was dismissed by the Police Board yesterday afternoon for drunkenness. She reported that he had not been home all night and that she had been very despondent. She feared something serious might have occurred. After the trial yesterday Ready had quite a long conversation with Captain Fruchte, in which he seemed to be in despair over the result which he said, deprived his wife and two little ones of the means of subsistence. Those who saw him and heard him talk are of the opinion that in all probability the unfortunate wife's suspicions may be well founded.

NEW YORK, January 20.—Shortly before 2 o'clock this afternoon, three alarms were sent out for a fire which broke out in the brewery of Herman Koehler & Co., on First avenue, between Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth, and which threatens to assume large proportions. Decadence of the Manly Art.

From the New York WORLD.

Those who are inclined to regard the manly art of self-defense from a purely refined and artistic point of view will regret that the great apostle of muscularity, Sullivan, descends to the use of so vulgar a word as "lick" in his last challenge, and this, too, with reference to a conflict with the college-bred, medical athlete, Mitchell. When pugilistic challenges lose the stamp of literary culture they have hitherto enjoyed, the manly art suffers in dignity.

Not a Representative Republican.

From the Boston Herald.

Senator John Logan objects to Dorman B. Eaton as a civil service commissioner on the ground that he is not a "representative Republican." The point is, no doubt, well taken, from the Logan point of view. Mr. Eaton is a reformer who "believes in it." A truly representative Republican of the Logan type would be Webster Flanagan of Flanagan's Mills, Tex.

BOBS UP AGAIN.

THE IRON MOUNTAIN SURFACE-TRACK BILL REINTRODUCED.

Property Owners in South St. Louis Interested—John Scullin's Scheme for a Belt Road—A Hackmen's Bill that Should Be Scrutinized Closely—Working for Col. Flad—City Hall Notes.

The St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company renewed its application in the Council, last evening, for authority and power "to construct, extend, maintain and operate a double-track railroad from First street to the Union Depot." This announcement is sufficient to arouse the whole southern part of the city, for there is no intimation that the tracks are to be anything but surface. The bill differs but little from the one previously introduced, and which was withdrawn apparently because of the protests of property-owners in the southern and southwestern parts of the city. There are several additional sections in the new bill, but these sections simply provide more elaborately for the protection of the streets proposed to be crossed in the matter of grades, sewer-pipes, etc. Another new section provides for the erection of the latest improved iron or wooden gates at street crossings to be attended by watchmen and mounted by automatic alarm gongs, danger signals, electric lights, etc. There is no mention in the bill of an elevated road and no intimation of anything but a surface track.

Just how the Council will act on this bill is a question. The people in the southern part of the city have announced that they will not submit to the imposition of an additional surface track, the Poplar street nuisance being about all they can possibly stand at present. The introduction of a bill for a surface road is, they claim, an act of bad faith on the part of the Iron Mountain people who promised a committee of property owners that the road should be elevated if built at all. Now that the railroad people have renewed their request, indignation meetings may confidently be looked for.

Scullin's Scheme.

The Municipal Assembly has been called upon a number of times to grant a franchise to a street railroad company proposing to operate a down-town belt railway. Messrs. Aglar, Nickes, Barnum, Wolfinger and others have pressed their claims for such a franchise but they were compelled to submit to the power of the street car interest in the Assembly. Mr. Scullin, as owner of some of the lines proposed to be used by these gentlemen, fought their claim for a franchise on the ground that it would rob his roads of half their business, and that if a belt line was necessary ne, would like to have an opportunity of getting a franchise for it himself. Mr. Scullin succeeded in defeating the proposed measures for several years. Mr. Scullin is now to the fore again, having been aroused by the introduction of a bill authorizing D. P. Slatterly, August Weyl, C. H. Sampson, John R. Meyer and John W. Munson to construct and operate a street railroad to be known as the Short Line Street Railway from Eleventh and Spruce streets out Poplar to Eighteenth, down Spruce to Sixth, and along Sixth to Market. This would form a loop line taking in the hotels, the Union Depot and a little section north of the Union Depot, not now covered by a track. In opposition to this Mr. Scullin appeared before the committee on railroads of the House of Delegates and informed them that if they would hold the Short Line bill he would present an application for an ordinance which would serve all the purposes desired and would ask for permission to lay track on only three blocks of ground. This bill was introduced in the House last night and will go to the Railroad Committee, which will then be obliged to judge the wants of the two bills. The probability is that neither will be passed and the down-town belt road scheme will be killed again. Mr. Scullin's bill provides for the connecting of his Pine street and Union Depot tracks with a switch on to the Broadway car line's tracks at the corner of Pine and Fifth streets, and the building of a new track on Lucas avenue alongside Union Market from Fifth to Sixth streets, the occupation of the Sixth street car line's tracks to Locust and a construction of a new track from Locust to Pine. This gives a regular all-round track from the Union Depot around Broadway, Sixth street and Pine.

A Blow at Individual Hackmen.

Mr. M. R. R. Collins, Jr., Delegate from the Eighteenth Ward, introduced a bill into the House last night, the one section of which provides as follows:

"No driver, owner or person having charge of any hackney carriage, cab, cabriolet, baggage wagon or other vehicle for hire, while occupying a public stand, shall be allowed to leave his vehicle and go therefrom on the side of the street other than that on which said vehicle is then standing, or farther therefrom than twenty feet, for the purpose of soliciting business. Nor shall any such owner, driver or person having charge of any such aforesaid vehicle solicit custom, patronage or trade while occupying a public stand for any hotel, boarding or eating house, clothing store, railroad ticket office or agency or for any quacks called doctor, or shyster called lawyer, or for any other business, profession, trade or avocation other than the employment of his own said vehicle, without having obtained a license from the city authorities authorizing him to so solicit, and any said driver, owner or person having charge of any of the aforesaid vehicles occupying a public stand, who shall violate the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than $5 nor more than $50 for each offense."

This is a bill that will bear inspection. It is said to be introduced in the interest of the Transfer Company and that such a law would operate against individual hackmen and in favor of a monopoly. It is further said that this bill is the result of a series of efforts now being made by a clique at the Union Depot to kill off the hackmen who make a living there.

Working for Col. Flad.

Water Commissioner Whitman has been pulling wires for some time past for the nomination and election of Col. Flad to the position of President of the American Society of Civil Engineers. This body is composed of all the leading civil engineers of the country, 700 or 800 in number, and as the position of president is a mark of high honor and purely an honorary one, Mr. Whitman's offices have been in the nature of high friendship for Col. Flad. The fact that he was being pushed for the position was not known to Col. Flad until recently. Mr. Whitman was anxiously waiting this noon for word from New York, where the ballots, sent by letter from all points in the country, were counted to-day. Col. Flad's opponent is Mr. Washington A. Roebling of Troy, N. Y., who was the chief engineer of the Brooklyn Suspension Bridge.

DEADLY PORK.

Eight Cases of Trichenosis Developed from Eating Diseased Meat.

The outbreak of trichinosis in North St. Louis, mentioned in Monday's POST-DISPATCH is more serious than it was at first thought to be. There are eight persons in whom the disease has developed more or less seriously. One is very ill and doubts are entertained in this case of final recovery. The disease was caused in all cases by the eating of some pork purchased by George Deppe, a huckster living at Twentieth and Mallinckrodt streets, from Frank Guedeman, a farmer living at Florrisant. Deppe has a wife and six children, all of whom ate some of the pork. Mrs. Deppe made sausage of part of the meat and sent some of it around to her neighbors living in the same house. She sent some to a Mrs. Hoffs and to William Johnson, both of whom ate the sausages raw and are SUFFERING FROM TRICHINOSIS.

In the Deppe family none of the meat was eaten raw, but it was all partially cooked. The meat was bought on the sixth of this month and the first symtoms developed in the youngest child, a boy of 7, who complained of intense pains in his head and bowels. Dr. L. P. Pallman was called in and was uncertain at first about the symptoms. This was on Wednesday last. The next day the oldest boy, aged 13, complained of the same symptoms, and also a girl aged about 9. Dr. Pallman asked particularly about the food which had been eaten, and after careful inquiry learned about the pork. He secured some, and, making a microscopical examination, discovered unmistakable evidences of trichinæ. He at once pronounced the disease trichianosis, and forbade the eating of any more of the meat.

The man Jahnsen, who ate largely of the raw sausage, was the first to fall sick, but it was not known what was the matter with him for several days. He is in the worst condition of all, and may not recover. In the Deppe family Deppe himself, his wife and the three children with Anton Lindeman, a young man boarding with them, are the only ones afflicted. The oldest boy is the most affected of all, the others being able to be out of bed but not out of doors. Fortunately only a small part of the meat was eaten.

GUEDEMAN HAD THREE HOGS,

which he sold at the same time as the one affected with trichinae. One was sold to Anton Bispinck and another to Mrs. Brockman, both living in the same neighborhood. No ill effects have been observed from this meat and an examination of it by Dr. Pallman failed to discover the slightest traces of trichinæ in it. The remainder of the meat purchased by Deppe was taken by the Health Department yesterday and was destroyed.

Dr. Pallman was called upon by a POST-DISPATCH reporter to-day, and was asked about the cases. He showed some specimens of the meat through his microscope, which displayed large and well-developed trichinæ, easily seen, coiled among the muscular fibers. He said when he was first called in that he did know what was the matter, and had much difficulty in eliciting the information about the hog which had been purchased. He said that the members of the Deppe family were only slightly affected, as the meat they ate had been partially cooked, but that Johnsen was very ill, as he had eaten raw meat. He said he could find no traces of trichinæ in the other hogs sold by Guedeman.

THE AFFECTED PERSONS.

The reporter called at the Deppe house and found one the children and Mrs. Deppe still confined to their beds with the disease. Two of the three children stricken down were up and playing around the house with their brothers and sisters, and, excepting an occasional pain in the legs, were well and free from any inconvenience.

Mrs. Deppe is still quite low, though Dr. Pallman gives it as his opinion that there is a doubt as to the existence of the parasite in her system.

Mr. Deppe said that the symptoms first made their appearance on Wednesday of last week, George, a lad of 7, and the youngest affected, being the first to complain. Then followed similar complaints from Lizzie, a girl of 9, and after her came Hiney, 13 years of age. The balance of the children in the family escaped. Johnson is still in bed, and is suffering from the disease probably more than any of those afflicted.

Mrs. Hoffswelle, who lives on the same floor of the building and who also ate the pork, is but slightly affected, being able to walk around and attend to her household duties.

Mr. Deppe said that the meat eaten was fried slightly but not thoroughly. None of Deppe's family ate any of the sausage. Anton Lindeman, the boarder, did not experience a very heavy attack and was not required to go to bed at all.

A LABOR RIOT.

The Strikers in the Coke Region Resort to Violence.

STONEVILLE, PA., January 20.—The situation has assumed an alarming phase in the coke regions this morning. Three hundred strikers, armed with bars, coke forks and revolvers, started on the march. They drove the men from work at the Alice and charged Warden's coke yard at this place. Then the Mayfield and Donelly mines were visited. A mile west of here a boy named Mentzer was terribly beaten and the yard boss, McCabe, was chased and hammered. Every oven front was crushed in. The rioters have gone across the country toward the Rising Sun works. The greatest trouble is yet to come. Saturday will be pay day, and on Monday the ten days will have expired since notice to quit was given to the strikers in company houses. There will likely be serious trouble when ejectment is attempted. The report that the Governor had been called on for aid is untrue. Sheriff Stewart says he will not send until he finds himself unable to cope with the disturbed elements.

THE SITUATION SERIOUS.

A Connellsville dispatch says: The Trotter, Dexter, Clinton and Franklin works are idle to-day, the workmen having joined the strikers. At Ft. Hill the advance has been granted and the men are at work. Over four thousand men are now out and the strike is spreading throughout the region. At Stoneville the employes were attacked this morning, and five of them severely beaten. Trouble is also reported at the Redstone works, and officers have started for that place. The action of the operators in sending uniformed police from Pittsburg has aggravated the situation.

Window-Glass Manufacturers.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20.—The annual Convention of the American Window-Glass Manufacturers' Association was held here yesterday. J. L. Bodine, President of the association, presided. The annual report showed that the number of furnaces running at the beginning of the year was 104, with 918 pots, a decrease of 40 pots since last year. The product of the present blast was 700,000 boxes, being 600,000 less than last year. There are now 450,000 boxes on hand, being 100,000 less than last year. The consumption of French glass has fallen off more than American, the decrease for the last six months being about 12 per cent. No agreement was reached as to advancing prices or limiting production, each manufacturer being left to act upon his own judgment. A resolution was adopted, instructing the Tarriff Committee of the association to adopt all proper means to resist a reduction of the tariff.

The Cigar Makers' Strike.

NEW YORK, January 20.—Nine thousand cigar makers and other employes of the League, employed by the Cigar Manufacturers' Association, are idle to-day. The direct cause of the trouble is the refusal of the employes of Levy Brothers to declare their strike off and return to work. The employes have banded themselves together to resist this demand. By to-morrow the packers in all the shops will have joined the strikers. The strike extends to the cirgar box making trade. When the packers quit, the number on strike will have been swelled to over 10,000. The manufacturers claim they have sufficient stock made up to fill orders for several months to come. The packers going out, they say, will not deter them from supplying customers with the stock now made up, but not packed.

President McCoy of the Manufacturers' Association denied that the firm of Lichenstein Bro's had intimated their desire to withdraw from the association. The firm had told him to-day that they would have no settlement with their locked-out employes, except through the Cigarmakers Association. Meetings of the strikers are being held to-day and arrangements made for the support of the men on a strike. The members will be paid probably $4 or $5 per week. The strikers say they have enough funds to hold out for six months.

Will be Married To-night.

Miss Rebecca Peck, daughter of Mr. Charles Peck, and Mr. J. Warren Dusenbery, Jr., will be married to-night, and after the ceremony will give a reception at the residence of Mr. Peck, No. 3807 Vandeventer Place, lasting from 7 till 9 o'clock.

The Dynamiters Indicted.

It is expected that the Grand Jury will make their final report to-morrow. They were engaged to-day in taking evidence in the dynamite cases, and it is believed that several of the arrested parties have been indicted.

The Same Old Drunk.

ON THE OUTSIDE.

WHERE THE GAS LEGISLATION IS NOW APPARENTLY BEING DONE.

The Council's Movement for Delay—What the Programme of the St. Louis Company Was—The Water Gas Policy—Mr. Temple's Attack on the Opposition Crowd—John Scullin Speaks for the St. Louis Company.

It was said yesterday that a great deal of fine legislation was necessary on the part of the Council in settling the gas question to the satisfaction of the people. To-day the indications are that the fine legislation is being done on the outside and the members of the Council, instead of acting independently and intelligently, are being manipulated by the two corporations who are represented in the bills under consideration. The Council last night, instead of acting independently, postponed action for a week for the alleged purpose of ascertaining whether one of the corporations would deign to accept beforehand the valuable franchise proposed to be given it. This was done not at their own instigation, but by the advice of the representatives of one of the corporations present. There was no apparent necessity for a week's delay in the matter, as the whole gas question could have been settled as well last night as next Tuesday night, and the than to give time to the generals of both corporations to skirmish. By delaying the settlement of the question the Council leaves itself open to ugly criticism.

The programme of the friends of the St. Louis Company in the Council last night was to pass the St. Louis bill and adjourn. These gentlemen were, however, out-generaled by the water gas man and by the almost fatal absence of Councilman Haines, who is confined to his bed with illness. The St. Louis Company's friends in the Council are to-day bitterly assailing Mr. W. H. Stone for his action yesterday. They claim he had no right to go to the St. Louis Company and ask whether or not it would accept the bill, and they hint that he played false in voting for an adjournment to next Tuesday. One of these was asked why he accompanied Mr. Stone to the St. Louis Company's office. The explanation was that he wanted to see what Stone was up to.

MR. JOSEPH TEMPLE,

like Mr. Seddon and Mr. Bell, is an avowed friend of the St. Louis Company's measure. He said this morning: "If it had not been for the action of Mr. Stone the St. Louis bill would have been passed by the Council last night. We intended to call it up and dispose of it altogether, and I had no more idea when we met that the House amendment would not be adopted than I have now of going out and letting that street car run over me. It was the first time the water-gas men showed their teeth and now I am willing to expect anything from them."

"Who engineered the defeat?"

"Devoy and Tredway."

"You didn't expect they would submit to the passage of the other company's bill, did you?"

"I didn't expect bad faith. I tell you, the water-gas people promised us when the St. Louis Company's bill was introduced that they would not oppose it. Tredway said that all he wanted was his bill, and he didn't care when it was passed. 'Just give us our bill,' he said, 'and pass any other bill you want to whenever you want to.' I know of this position since, but that he made this statement there is no possible doubt. Now, when the whole thing is on the point of settlement, he walks in and defeats the plan. This won't do, and he can't afford nor can his Company afford to block legislation by preventing the passage of the St. Louis Company's bill. He has not done the square thing at all in this matter. The agreement was that the St. Louis Company's bill was to pass the House in the same shape it passed the Council. This was not kept. The water-gas people injected a new section into it, for the purpose of killing it. Then Tredway comes to me with a proposition to have the Mayor come to a Council meeting and have both bills passed simultaneously. I wouldn't entertain any such proposition. How can I or anybody agree to have the Mayor come down and sign a bill he has, presumably, not looked over? The Mayor doesn't do things in that way. If any one thinks he is going to sign any bill without considering it fully he is mistaken in the man, Francis don't do things that way. Last night was the first time the water gas men showed their teeth. We will see how long the thing will be kept up."

HE HAS TRIED TO BACK OUT

The prospects for a deadlock in the Council seem to be very good. The St. Louis Company directors announce that they are willing to accept the bill in the communication addressed to Mr. Stone. Whether they will supplement this communication with a stronger one next Tuesday night is a question.

WHAT MR. SCULLEN SAYS.

"If we had thought," said Mr. Scullin this morning, "that the answer given to Mr. Stone's questions was not sufficient, we would have amplified it to any degree necessary. I say now that we say, 'y-e-s, yes,' to every proposition of Mr. Stone, and if the Council desires, it will submit an elaborate acceptance of the bill next Tuesday evening. There should be no doubt of our desire to accept the bill, and there would be none if it were not for the other side. Our directors stood ready to attend the Council meeting in a body last evening, for the purpose of accepting the bill."

"Do you mean when you say you are ready to accept the bill that you are ready to reduce the price of gas, also?"

"Certainly. The bill accepted, the price of gas is at once reduced. This I will say, though, we shall not accept the bill if the water gas ordinance is passed the same evening ours is."

"Why not?"

"Because we want a few days to put our bill into execution. If the water-gas bill passes it becomes a law immediately. If ours passes it cannot become a law until signed by the Mayor. We would not accept the bill if the water-gas bill were passed before ours became a law."

Public Property in Detroit.

From the Free Press.

"It wasn't three days ago that I pu three penholders and three blotting pads on this desk, and not one is to be found now."

It was a Post Office official and he referred to the writing desk in the corridor.

"What becomes of 'em?" asked the reporter.

"Stolen."

"You don't mean to say that we have people mean enough to steal a half-penny plotting pad?"

"But I do. I see a dozen cases a week."

"Who are the thieves?"

"Women, mostly. And when it isn't a woman it's a business man. Now, I'm going to stock up the desk again, and you hand around here for a while and see what you can see."

Three penholders, each supplied with a new pen, and three fresh pads of blotting paper were laid out, and the watcher took his seat on a window-sill. In about five minutes a young man with a brisk air rushed up to the desk, directed a postal card, and knocked one of the penholders off on the floor as he rushed off. The second comer was also a man, and he picked up the pen, directed a letter with it, gave a quick glance around him and pocketed one of the blotters. The third was a woman, who put on her glasses, wrote a postal, and coolly pocketed a penholder. Then a boy lounged up and stole another; and between two business men who used the other pen the second blotter was pocketed. This left only one penhoder and one blotter. After seven or eight people had used them a woman with widow's weeds on directed a mourning envelope, stamped it and rolled the penholder up and pocketed both, regardless of who might be watching. She was not yet out of the building when a man rushed up to the desk, found nothing to write with, and pounded the walnut with his fist and growled out:

"I'll be hanged if I wouldn't like to twist that Postmaster's neck! This shows how little care a public official has for the convenience of the public!"

A Question of Rank.

From Mr. Yates' World, London, December 30.

Nobody who has been behind the scenes in Court affairs for the past nine months will be surprised at the announcement that the Queen has permitted the Count and Contess Gleichen to resume the rank and titles of of Prince and Princess Victor of Hohenlohe-Langenbeburg. When Prince Victor of Hohenlohe married the sister of the late Marquis of Hertford he dropped his rank and title and assumed the name that was conferred upon his wife, his marriage being morganatic. Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, in the same way, married the Duke of Richmond's sister, who was known officially as Countess Dornberg till a few months ago, when the Queen commanded that she should be acknowledged officially. In taking this course her Majesty has certainly exceeded her powers, for although she may rule that these ladies are to be raised to the ranks of their respective husbands at the English Court, yet she cannot influence the other Courts of Europe, the laws of which, in such matters are immutable as those of the Medes and Persians. These strange proceedings have really been caused by the circumstance that it has been intimated that Prince Henry of Battenburg's new rank and precedence as Royal Highness will not be recognized at Berlin, Vienna, or St. Petersburg, and, in fact, that those Courts regard the marriage of Princess Beatrice as a morganic aliance. This state of things is naturally very irritating to the Queen, especially as it is likely to lead to vexatious complications at her own Court.

FASHIONS FOR GENTLEMEN.

Novel Designs in Hosiery and Gloves—Odd Fancies in Handkerchiefs.

From the Boston Herald.

In hosiery there is the same diversity of demand that marks the call for underwear. Novelties are to be seen in fine balbriggans, with groundwork of black, seal-brown or navy blue, embroidered in vertical stripes of two colors and also in silk checks and combination plaids. Other designs are harlequin Roman stripes, cross-checked and with saw-teeth, bass and ladder vertical designs. A large display of socks is made in one place, where is shown large divided block in all the contrast colors of cardinal, gold and Lyons blue. Plain, soft merinos in hussar, wine and a multitude of other shades are to be seen, as are also neat grouped stripes on a variety of groundwork and a broad base, and basket weaves in cashmeres. One of the best authorities on the subject of gentlemen's attire says that the demand of the best class of custom is about equally divided, as far as socks go, between plain goods and striped goods. Another dealer states that, with the exception of intermediate calls for striped goods, he sells nothing but solid colored socks.

Fine antelope gloves in stone shades and in tan color are in strong request. They close with two buttons and are embroidered heavily up the back. Fine chevrettes in browns that are self embroidered in seven rows, are about equally in demand with real angora gloves in fancy colored backs, bearing diamond and zigzag designs on neutral and gray grounds. Scotch knit gloves in a new variety of mixtures are to be seen in exquisite assortment. They come in sizes for both boys and men. There seems to be a greater demand for unlined gloves than ever before. The lined article, excepting when wanted for special purposes, such as riding and driving, seems to be in bad grace. Tans and browns are the best sellers in goods intended for street wear, although gold tints are also popular.

As far as linen handkerchiefs are concerned, in the cheaper printed designs we have narrow borders, but in fine goods the borders are from one to two and a half inches in width. Block and line plaids, some of them having corner designs and others completely covered with various shaped figures, comes in vast numbers and varieties. Tinted centers, with bright edges, negative ellipse entrees with white borders, are also numerous. Among the patterns of French linen handkerchiefs mentioned in previous articles are scenes representing cannibals roasting missionaries, ballet scenes, bathing scenes and other pictures unique in design and finish. These handkerchiefs are loud and are not carried to any great extent, but in some of them the coloring is undeniably beautiful.

Our American Ballet.

From the Providence Journal.

Then the ballet came bouncing in. In the front row were the pupils of the American Ballet School. The great North American heart of the audience bounded with an overwhelming sense of the national pride when the twelve pupils came galloping down toward the footlights like so many frisky young colts. Most of them were in the neighborhood of 15 years old, and they were longitudinally vast. In the matter of breadth they were not worth considering seriously. They stand in two neat and correct little rows and burst into twelve queer little smiles, that looked like twelve infantile copies of the dear and familiar old ballet girl smile which has haunted mankind for decades. Then they placed their twenty-four arms akimbo and at a beat of the leaders baton their white boots began to fly about in the most reckless and astonishing manner. The boots or slippers seemed to have no connection whatever with the enthusiastic young girls, but bobbed about in the air as though quite unacquainted with their owners. After it had danced its little dance and been overwhelmed with applause, the school courtesied joyously out of sight, and the professional ballet came dancing down. There was a great deal of expert dancing, but the spectators missed the lithe, lissome and coy flinging about of slippers which characterized the dancing of the pupils.

Commercial Notes.

One reason why the English millers are so favorable to Indian wheat is, so it is said, that they can inject 15@20 per cent of water into the flour while grinding, and the flour will hold the extra weight. Egyptian wheat is also taken by the "washers" of Liverpool and cleaned free of expense for the extra weight from the absorption of the water.——If England does impose an import duty on foreign wheat she will simply be telling the United States that her own coloniss, India, Australia, and Canada, are raising enough wheat, with that grown at home, to render her independent of this country.——Imports of wheat (no flour) into the United Kingdom last week were equal to 1,220,000 bu against 2,275,000 bu wheat and flour the preceding week and 1,865,000 bu for same week last year.——Adding the imports of wheat last week to the farmers' deliveries for same period, the amount was less than the Kingdom's consumptive requirements by 1,670,000 bu, consequently their supplies were reduced that much.——Alex. Davidson, official market reporter of the Exchange, has resigned that position to accept one with Fath, Ewald & Co. In Mr. Davidson the Exchange loses an efficient, accurate and faithful employe, and it will not be easy to fill the vacancy.——Strong tips to buy wheat came from Chicago late yesterday and this morning.——The produce commission men and other dealers in eggs are moving for the appointment of an egg inspector in this market. Other cities have these inspectors and it is believed it would be beneficial to the egg trade of St. Louis to appoint such an official here. It would serve as a guarantee of the condition of shipments to other points and would make the country merchant more careful in selecting the eggs they send here.——Some bull trader in this market telegraphed to Chicago and New York that about all the flour mills were running here full blast. The fact is that only four city mills out of eighteen are running here, and three only on about two-thirds time. Most of these expect to shut down shortly.

St. Louis Markets.

FORENOON SESSION, CLOSING 1 P. M.

Wheat showed up in better form this morning. On yesterday's curb there had been reports of large export purchasers in New York and European political complications that then strengthened the markets greatly, and this strength lasted well over into to-day. Cables were either "quiet" or "not much doing;" and California cargoes declined 6d, and some private English cables reported a depressed tone, but another stated an improved feeling. The imports into the United Kingdom were very small, but there was a probability of a good increase in the amount on ocean passage. Receipts at ten points in this country were 175,000 bu, and shipments 170,000 bu. The weather was not favorable, rain falling and freezing as it fell. There was a stronger and more confident feeling in the home market that seemed, also, to prevail at other speculative centers. A good reaction seemed generally to be looked for, shorts covered freely, and there was good long buying. This was not based upon anything in particular except an idea that there had been a big decline and a reaction was in order. On the strength of this and advances elsewhere, May sold up 1⅛@¼c, from 92¼c at opening to 93⅜@½c, but after the noon call was raided by the bears who fiercely assailed the market, breaking it to the opening rate. Late there was a sharp and quick reaction to 93, the market going up with a hurrah and on a sudden upturn in other markets and closed at 92⅞, or ⅜c above yesterday's close. February sold at 77¾c; June at 93¼c to 93@⅛c; July at 89¾c; August at 88⅞c to 89c. Cash grades were firm and No. 2 red sold higher, city millers buying fairly. No. 2 red, 87@87½ E. side, 89@89½c in D.; No. 3 red, 85c bid E. side, 86½c for D. and St. L.; No. 4, 75c bid for M., 76c for St. L. and D.; rejected, 55c bid for M.

Corn futures were firm and improved ¼c. The rainy weather led to expectations of a continuance of the light receipts and with better markets elsewhere quite a good demand developed; January sold at 33⅝c; February at 34c; March at 34½c, and later 34⅝c was bid; May at 37c to 37⅛c. Cash grades were firm and No. 2 sold ⅛c higher, with shippers and speculators buying; all else quiet. No. 2 33¼c, regular 33⅜c, E side; No. 3 31c in C, 31½@31⅞c E side; No. 4 30½c in St. L. and C, and bid E side; No. 2 white 35½c regular; No. 3 do 32½c regular, 33½c bid this side. no grade 28½c bid regular.

CATTLE—The market opened active, with a rather light supply of stock on sale, and a decidedly stronger feeling displayed. There were more buyers present than during any day this week, Pittsburg, Cleveland, Buffalo and the seaboard markets being all represented, and the competition between them was taken advantage of by salesmen to add a little to prices. Indeed local buyers claimed that the advance amounted to fully 25c for their kind and they fought strongly against paying it, but found they were obliged to do so or go without, salesmen having the advantage and holding it.

HOGS—The conditions were not altogether favorable this morning, but nevertheless trade was active and the market stronger with some grades bringing an advance of 5c. The quality of the offerings was unusually poor, but few really choice lots being found among the arrivals. Packers and shippers were both excellent buyers, but speculators and city butchers bought rather lightly. To packers sales were made at $3.65@3.90 for mixed, and as high as $4.10@4.15 for the few choice heavies they were enabled to get. Yorkers sold largely at $3.60, the range being from $3.60@3.65, which is better than the rates prevailing yesterday. Mixed hogs to speculators brought $3.60@3.90 and butchers paid generally $4@4.15.

SENATOR VEST belongs to the lucky class of authors who readily find publishers willing to publish their manuscripts without a guarantee to cover cost of publication.

A TYPOGRAPHICAL error in one of our headlines yesterday changed "All Night on Gas" to "All Right on Gas," which would be a rash thing to say about the House of Delegates.

SENATOR LOGAN reminds the public that no Senator has ever become President. This is true, but Senators may become cowboys and historians with such ease that there is no occasion for them to lament the loss of the Presidency. No man should long for the whole universe.

THE Hennepin Canal lobby is now ready for action. Thus far the River Convention in Washington has done nothing to encourage the friends of the great projected sewer. Some of the Chicago men have not yet learned that a canal is not a river, and that a River Convention is not called to discuss a canal, especially such a one as the fantastic Hennepin ditch.

SENATOR SHERMAN stoutly insists that the Ohio election laws should be radically altered in the interests of fairness and morality. The laws could be improved, but they answer tolerably well. What Ohio needs is a reformation both of her voting element and her counting element. The malady is moral and spiritual, rather than political. A Constitutional amendment might do some good, but what is needed is a widespread change of heart. SAM JONES may effect a little improvement, but the emergency calls for heavier artillery.

CONGRESSMAN O'NEILL has been criticized for holding the first meeting of his Committe on Labor in his private rooms, and defends himself by saying that the Committee had no room of its own in the Capitol. If the Committee on Labor is not considered important enough to have a room of its own, the sooner that is made known the better. Several millions of voters who are somewhat interested in the Committee would rather see it in session on the Capitol steps or in the rotunda than hear of its submitting to the snub of not having a committee room.

REPRESENTATIVE WARNER of Ohio wants a special committee of eleven appointed to examine the mud-lumps and the bar which are "currently reported" as forming outside of the jetties at the mouth of the Mississippi. As the Government has an army engineer officer stationed at the jetties to take soundings, it might be cheaper, instead of sending a special committee of eleven down there, to follow the plan of JOHN PHŒNIX in his celebrated survey of the road to the Mission Dolores, and ask the engineer how deep the water is. The committee might go to New York and investigate the mud-lumps which are rising up to the surface of the harbor under the fostering influence of the garbage scows of the city.

THE instruction given to the jury in the United States Court at Topeka in the case of Davis vs. The St. Louis and San Francisco Railway Company very clearly sets forth the obligation of a common carrier to treat all comers alike, and to provide for the transaction of their business within reasonable limits and without discrimination. But the instructions in regard to the mode of estimating the damages necessarily illustrated the weakness and inadequacy of the common-law remedy for the enforcement of common-law rights when the common carrier is a great railroad corporation. The Court, in substance, told the jury that the common law excluded any estimate of the resulting loss from the utter ruin of plaintiff's business by hostile discrimination. The plaintiff must prove just how many car-loads of coal he had asked the railroad to carry for him, and which the railroad had wrongfully refused to carry for him, and the jury must then award him damages equal to the profits he can prove that he would have realized on those car-loads of coal, and no more. As the instructions allowed a large margin for justifiable refusals, and required the plaintiff to prove the wrongfulness of every refusal included in the estimate of damages, it is obvious that a railroad can ruin any man or any business along its line with but little restraint from the damages recoverable under common-law rules. Statutes affording adequate remedies for the enforcement of common-law rights are what the country needs.

THE BOYCOTT.

As a last remedy against boycotting in Ireland, it is to be declared a crime. This shows that the new weapon is doing its work thoroughly. So effective is it that to resist it England is prepared to throw aside that whole system of political economy on which recent legislation has been based.

Freedom of trade, freedom of action, freedom of intercourse, these are the fundamental principles underlying the British industrial system. The seller is free to ask any price he wishes, because the buyer is free to buy where he chooses. The employer is free to offer starvation wages, because the workman is free to refuse them. The landlord is free to charge any rent, because he cannot get more than the land is worth. These and similar beautiful theories have comforted the Pecksniffs and Chadbands of British political economy, while the plutocrats of trade and of land and of politics have waxed fatter and fatter from starvation of labor, the extortion of tenants and the monopoly of office.

Suddenly some poor Irish peasants discovered that they, too, had some small, younger brother's portion of that boasted British freedom—the right to let other people alone. That was all the right they claimed or exercised—not the right of resistance, not the right of revolution, not independence nor separation, nor vengeance nor retaliation, but merely the one, poor, simple, natural, primal and inalienable right to go about their daily business under the law and among themselves. They tried this plan on one of their persecutors, one Captain BOYCOTT, and a new force was created.

Now, England is trying to fight it by reactionary and Tory legislation, by the personal government of Russia, the persecution of the Czars, instead of that ample freedom of the land of the habeas corpus and of the Great Charter. The attempt is hopeless. Toryism can only stultify itself by trying conclusions with the new force. No free government can legislate against the boycott, and wherever the conditions permit of effective boycotting, boycotting is going to be tried. If it is an evil, the only way to cure it is to remove the causes; as long as the causes exist the consequences will follow.

VETOED.

The Kansas City Times thinks that Attorney General BOONE's protest against the sine die adjournment of the Branch Penitentiary Commissioners is unanswerable, and that the strongest point he makes is where he says: "We have not performed the duties imposed upon us by the act of the General Assembly of this State, approved March 28, 1885." Now, whether or not this is true and unanswerable, depends altogether upon the nature of the duties imposed upon the Commissioners by the act aforesaid. If the duty imposed upon them was to ascertain where Governor MARMADUKE wished them to locate the Branch, and to locate it according to his wish, they certainly have not performed that duty. But if the Legislature intended that the location should be selected by the Governor alone, why did the act pretend to charge the Commissioners with the duty and responsibility of choosing the site? If the Governor's single will was to outweigh that of the three Commissioners why were they designated at all? On the contrary, if the law made it their duty to exercise their own best judgment in the selection of a site, they have not only performed that duty, but they have selected four different sites, and the Governor has refused to sign a warrant for the purchase of any one of the four. He has also refused to indicate any location which he will sanction the purchase of. In discontinuing their wild hunt for a location that would please the Governor, when it was an open secret that the Governor and the Warden were against the purchase of any new site under that act, the Commissioners simply refused to be trifled with and to be made a butt of any longer. The next time the Legislature wants a site selected it should either commission the Governor alone to make the selection, or it should divest him of all control over the choice of those who are commissioned to make it. In this case, instead of vetoing a bill, the Governor has simply vetoed an act of the Legislature.

THE Lexington Intelligencer has a long and earnest leader on the Missouri Pacific's recent advance of 25 per cent in its charge for carrying Lafayette County's coal to market. The explanation of this advance is obvious. It is to secure to the GOULD mines a monopoly of the coal business, to freeze out and ruin the owners of other mines and force them to sell their property at whatever price an inside ring of the owners of the Missouri Pacific may choose to give. In this way the railroads are fast acquiring for their owners and managers the actual ownership or monopoly control of all the coal and other mines in this country. What has occurred in Pennsylvania and other States is taking place in Missouri, because the Legislature refuses to check the wrong by providing adequate remedies for the enforcement of the State Constitution. In vain does the Intelligencer appeal to Mr. GOULD's public spirit and sense of justice. All its suggestions that he is blind to his own interest, all its remonstrances and expostulations are to him but idle wind which he regards not. Judge FOSTER's instruction to the jury in a case where a ruined coal operator asked damages for unlawful discriminations, show how ineffectual are the common-law remedies for the protection of the public, and how urgent is the need for some statute which will compel railroads to obey the law.

FOR the liberal salary paid our City Comptroller he might afford to devote his whole time to the service of St. Louis taxpayers, who, on acount of the neglect of their interests by the persons paid to look after them, are forced to pay far more than a lawful or fair share of the State taxes. A little more attention to such matters on the part of city officials, and a little less attention to the working of the patronage machine at Washington, would be appreciated. With two Senators, a lot of Congressmen and a considerable retinue of Federal office-holders and office-seekers all coerced into the whitewashing business, we do not see why the city officials should be required to neglect their own duties, and spend so much time in Washington retracting their former testimony against the man whom they used to denounce as a villainous trickster and corrupter of politics.

SIMMERING it all down, the only real objection made to FRANK COCKRELL by his opponents is on the score of his kinfolks. Kinfolks are troublesome things to have, but nearly everybody has a few, and we know of no means to prevent COCKRELL or any one else from being troubled that way until enlightened public sentiment is directed to their general suppression.—[Keytesville Democrat.

The objection is not on the score of his kinfolks nor to the score of his kinfolks, but it is based on the fact that the score of his kinfolks are all imbibing healthful and nutritious pap in political positions, while scores and thousands of Democrats, whose only offense is that they are not kinfolks, are chopping wood. That is what is making FRANK COCKRELL less popular than he was before he provided for his score of kinfolks.

Mr. Garland and Dress Coats.

Washington Special to the Times-Democrat.

Attorney-General Garland has been forced to take conspicuous ground as an anti-dress coat champion. He remained away from the President's state dinner last night rather than attire himself in regulation costume. A friend, while smilingly remonstrating with him today, said: "You ought not to take a stand like that. It exposes you to much badinage. You are left so alone in that position."

"Alone!" exclaimed the Attorney-General, "Why, man, I've got the whole State of Arkansas at my back."

"You don't mean that?" protested the friend.

"I do," insisted Mr. Garland; "I mean to say that if there is a dresscoat in all my bailiwick I don't know of it, and that I should hate to be convinced there are any in hiding there."

Children in Factories.

From the Philadelphia Record.

Fifteen thousand children are employed in New Jersey factories, many of whom are compelled to work fourteen hours per day and are deprived of the opportunity for rudimentary education. The cheap production which is assured by this form of labor is bought at too dear a price. Unschooled and overworked children, wherever they are found, are a proof of defective public administration. New Jersey philanthropists and lawmakers should bestir themselves and set this matter right.

Why Suspend?

From Consul-General Walker's Report.

In Germany the learned body has taken the lead in this direction (an international bimetallic compact) and it has been followed by the leading commercial houses, and it is also asserted that a majority of the National Parliament has reached a similar conclusion, and may at an early day be persuaded to act. I beg to reiterate the opinion which I have expressed in former dispatches, that nothing will so much hasten the adoption in Europe of the monetary policy which we desire to have adopted as the suspension of silver coinage in the United States.

About Removals.

From the Philadelphia Record.

There should be no confusion or misunderstanding about removals from office. When a removal is made for public and official reasons it should be so understood, and when one is made for party grounds there should be no pretense of civil-service reform. There has been too much cant of civil-service reform and too little of the real thing. Whatever embarrassment belongs to the present situation is largely of President Cleveland's own making. Before entering upon his office he planted himself on the ground that he would make no removals from office during an unexpired term except for "offensive partisanship," unfitness or maladministration of trust. When an officer is removed before the end of his term he is, therefore, subject to the suspicion or reproach that he was removed for one or all of these causes. He has, then, in common justice, a right to insist on the reasons which governed the Executive in removing him. Although he never had this right before, he has acquired it under the principle of action laid down by the President himself. Under no civil-service policy should a citizen of this Government be sent out of office with an underserved suspicion resting upon him.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

The Words of a Suffragist.

ST. LOUIS, January 17, 1886.

To the Editor of the POST-DISPATCH:

In your paper you have on more than one occasion referred to the position of the suffrage women of the country in regard to the Edmunds bill, but your last issue not only has two articles on the subject, but you have dignified the opposition by a direct editorial question addressed to all suffrage women.

Whatever may be the opinion of women on this subject, the trend of all these articles has been to lead the uninformed public to believe that suffrage women are opposing this bill because they wish to protect polygamy. You ask: "Is it for this that the lady agitators would have all women enfranchised?" I am sorry that I have not a full copy of the Edmunds bill before me, so that I might answer your question more comprehensively, but this possibly makes little difference, as the stanchest ship needs only one hole in her hull to carry her to the bottom, so this bill should go down if for no other objections, for the more important one, that which relates to disfranchisement.

Women are said to be illogical, unreasoning, jumping at conclusions regardless of consequnces, centering all on the gaining of the end which they may immediately wish to accomplish. Now, not only Mormon but all women are and have been taught, all down the ages, to obey men. They can not publicly approach the throne of the Eternal except through his mediation; unless handed to her by the hand of man she must perish for the bread and blood of the atonement, and to every aspiration for the higher and better she is told in the language of Milton, man is for God, "She for God in him."

This doctrine has been taught in every church in Christendom; there has been no qualification as to the character of the man for whom this obedience and adoration is demanded, and these Mormon women have simply been more receptive and teachable than their Gentile sisters. They have simply obeyed their husbands; they are told that not only the Book of Mormon but St. Paul says: "Wives obey your husbands," and when the Mormon husband brought to his home his plural wives, was it wonderful that the wife drank the bitter cup in silence and tears when she recognized the fact that neither husband, God or country would defend her? And here, in the face of all these facts, comes this Edmunds' bill with its infamous provisions still farther oppressing and degrading her by disfranchisement, while the guilty husband, the man against whom the law will not protect her, is not disfranchised, but is considered worthy to sit with the elders of the land. These men who have traveled over the globe as missionaries, bringing to our shores the weak, the young, the ignorant to minister to their degraded passions, are to be honored, while their ignorant, and in some cases innocent, victims are alone to be punished by this great United States Government, and you tell us we "are committing a political blunder in screaming." A blunder is it? Then we will continue to blunder, and God grant that like the scream of the Banshee our cry may ring through every home in the land to warn of impending danger.

That the crime of polygamy could and should have been stamped out by this Government years ago, there is no doubt, because it is a material, a physical crime, not only against woman, but against nature. But if the Government can confiscate the property of the Mormon Church in time of peace, it can confiscate that of the Baptist Church also, and while its hand is in this church business, may it not with equal propriety establish an Edmunds Church and require us all to say amen? I had supposed that in this country religious liberty was fully established, and had believed, with Mr. Jefferson, that it was one of his greatest works. And if, as Mr. Edmunds himself says, "not one-quarter of the Mormons believe in polygamy," why confiscate the property of all and disfranchise three-fourths of the women for the sin of one-fourth?

The Big Wind in Ireland.

To the Editor of the POST-DISPATCH:

In one of last week's editions of your paper I read your answer to the query of "Reader" in reference to "the big wind in Ireland," which stated that his question "was unintelligible." Permit me to inform your correspondent that the hurricane popularly known in Ireland as "the big wind" occurred on the night of the 6th of January, 1837, and resulted in extensive loss of life and property. In that beautiful island, (so blessed by nature but oppressed by man) that decks the bosom of the Atlantic, storms seldom prevail to any great extent, so that the night I have spoken of has been made memorable in the recollections of the Irish people by a circumstance that gave it a rather ominous significance according to the superstition that had become imbedded in the popular belief of the Irish people. It happened that a noted tyrant named McDowell, who resided near the picturesquely-situated little town of Killybegs County, Donegal, paid the debt of nature on that particular night. McDowell, whose ancestors came to Ireland to assist Cromwell in his war of massacre and spoliation against the native Celts, was like most of his class of the present day, a cruel and unrelenting tyrant; having quenched the fires in the humble, but happy and prosperous homes of 650 families. Nor did all that brutal and fiendish work satiate the rapacity of the anti-Christian monster. Not content with exercising the despotic powers which a barbarous law enabled him to wield over his luckless tenantry, he wreaked his vengeance on fourteen men, six of whom were priests, and had them executed on the trumped-up charge of high treason. Other incidents of his career recall some of the stirring events that characterized the closing days of the last and the beginning of the present century in Irish history. At the time of the rising of the United Irishmen, McDowell was serving as a lieutenant in the British army, and assisted at the execution of Robert Emmett. His was the hand that plunged the dagger into the breast of the noble-hearted Kildare patriot, Edward Fitzgerald, on the night of his arrest in Capel street, Dublin. Such was the execration in which that man was held by the Irish peasantry that the illiterate folks believed that his Satanic Majesty had come to take him away. The ignorance and superstition that existed in the Pagan era of Ireland's history and which was fostered by the Tanists under the Brehon laws, and handed down by tradition to successive generations, is now, thanks to education and interchange of customs with the New World, fast lifting its shroud from off the minds of the Irish people, and the night of the 6th of January, 1837, though still remembered as the night of the "big wind" is no longer spoken of as "McDowell's night."

Is This Financial Heresy?

MARSHFIELD, MO., January 15, 1886.

To the Editor of the POST-DISPATCH:

The Globe-Democrat calls the silver question an attempt to force parties to take 1,600 pounds of coal for a ton. Has the G.-D. forgot that the standard weight of a ton of coal during the war differed? The silver standard called for 2,000 pounds, the greenback standard about half that amount, or 1,000 pounds. The greenback standard was the people's standard, as that was their only currency that time. When Congress put coin into the Government bonds, did it not raise the weight of coal to 2,000 pounds, thus compelling the people to pay, not only for every 1,000 pounds of coal that they consumed during the war, but an equal amount that Wall street burnt on paper? Thiers, the French historian, tells us that France bonded her paper at its coin value. He said the people suffered the real loss (coal only 400 pounds to the ton); that it would have been a great injustice to the people after it had passed into the hands of the speculators to have done otherwise. Had we, after the war, imitated France by issuing coin bonds, taking in exchange greenbacks at their coin value, 1,200,000,000 ounces of silver would have settled our indebtedness. By allowing speculators to exchange our paper at par for coin we doubled our debt. Twenty odd years of constant toil has enabled us to reduce the national debt to some eighteen hundred millions of dollars (ounces of silver). If the Globe-Democrat's views, as illustrated by coal, prevail, and the size of our silver dollar is increased by one-third, will not the county owe in silver coin about the same number of ounces that she did after the war? Years ago in the mines it was generally understood that we could get our dust coined at the mint by paying 50 cents on the $100. This is the way mints ought to be run. The limit to coinage should always be a little above the capacity of our mines to furnish the precious metal, as the boss shoemaker limits his hands to the amount of work that comes in. No one here will cry if the gold brokers of Wall street are forced to burn a little short-weight coal.

Police at the Park.

ST. LOUIS, January 19.

To the Editor of the POST-DISPATCH:

All lovers of outdoor sport commend the article on coasting and skating in last night's POST-DISPATCH, which shows that the legitimate pleasures of winter are not yet dead, but there is cause for regret that you did not call attention to the want of police protection at Lafayette Park, which is daily thronged with skaters of all ages and classes. On last Sunday a gentleman was unmercifully guyed because he appeared on the ice in a peculiar costume and because there was no policeman in sight to run in the ringleaders. Again, on the same day I saw a little boy knocked insensible by a gang of roughs who were playing tag on the ice in direct violation of the regulations. If there is anything going on at the Exposition Building there are always a number of officers around, and at the theaters of nights the snug corner usually has its officer; but at the park which is so public as to admit gentlemen and hoodlums together there is seldom an officer, and indeed I understand that Superintendent Hunt has found the regular officer taken away from the park. If the police object to standing out in the cold tell them there is a warm room they can occupy while keeping an eye on the skaters.

Will some one be kind enough to tell M. D. what will harden a skin that is so delicate and thin that it chaps painfully at the least exposure to the weather, or what is the cause of it?

SUBSCRIBER.

[There is something in the atmosphere of Chicago which produces that condition of cheek commonly known as iron face, and people who go into politics generally lose their delicacy of skin. Prizefighters harden their skins by washing in solutions of salt and various astringents. Tendency to "chaps," however, is innate, and can be conquered only by good health, sound digestion, and open-air exposure and exercise.—EDITOR POST-DISPATCH.]

THE METROPOLITAN PRESS.

What the Editors of the New York Journals Are Saying This Morning.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

NEW YORK, January 20.—The WORLD, in its editorial columns to-day, says: "It is not fair to judge our unsophisticated diplomats by the standard of the European professionals who are educated for a life-long employment and follow it. We have been in the habit of distributing our foreign missions every four years among those of our diversified sons of nature who may desire to visit foreign lands at the public expense, and the result is obvions. The remedy is, we presume, in civil-service reform and in the institution of a grand diplomatic school at Washington, wherein the appointees may be instructed in the mysteries of apparel and bows, handling the knife and fork, dancing, disposition of the hat, conversation, proper place for whittling, whistling, smoking, chewing, etc."

THE SUN.

The Sun says: "Did any man or woman living ever see the color of conscious guilt coming into John Sherman's cheeks?"

THE TIMES.

The Times says: "The law authorizes the President to suspend civil officers during the recess of the Senate 'in his discretion.' Have not these words some meaning? What right has the Senate to demand that he shall vindicate his discretion to satisfy its curiosity? Blinded by a desire to unearth something that will serve as party capital, the Republican Senators are assuming a wrong position. If they shall make the proposed demand, it will not be made because they seek thereby the good of the service or of the nation. It will be simply a bit of nagging for a partisan purpose."

THE TRIBUNE.

The Tribune says: "Senator Vest ought to have remembered the old advice to people who live in glass houses. Then he would not be in his present unpleasant state of mind, for he never would have accused the people of Dakota of being 'revolutionary' simply because they organized a State to get into the Union as, surely, trying to get into the Union is better than trying to get out of it, as Senator Vest did, and the proceeding is not nearly so 'revolutionary.' This point is a fair one to make. If the Missouri Senator were wise he would acknowledge it and say no more about Dakota."

THE GLOOMY SEQUEL TO GOTHAM'S GAY FRENCH BALL.

A Frenchman with the Jim-Jams—Elegantly-Costumed Female High-Kickers Run In and Arraigned in the Police Court—A Girl with $7,000 Worth of Diamonds Unable to Pay a $10 Fine.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

NEW YORK, January 20.—The champagne did not begin to work at the French ball of Monday night until the early hours yesterday morning. Then the masks were thrown aside and those who remained went in for what Bardwell Slote calls a "H. O. T."—high old time. The police were on hand and about every ten minutes some dancer was assisted to the door and left to the mercies of the cabmen. The police were on the lookout for the usual performance of "kicking hats," an accomplishment which was now and then called for by the spectators in the galleries. The watchful eyes of Captain Clinchy were all over the hall and the enthusiasts were now and then given a word of warning. Before the ball closed several arrests were made and the prisoners, too happy to care where they spent the few hours before daylight, went away with officers with "good-bys" to their friends.

About 6 a. m., a few clubmen, rather the worse for wear, and Captain Clinchy's big sergeant were watching the peculiar antics of an intoxicated Frenchman with considerable interest. The Gaul threw his coat on the floor, and then his hat, and commenced to jump on them, shouting at the same time in his native tongue "Tuez le! Tuez le!" The veteran sergeant, the hero of a hundred fights who has lived in the toughest wards in the city, turned to one of the clubmen and asked "What does he say?" The club man replied, "Oh, he wants to kill somebody." An expression of supreme disgust passed over the features of the veteran, and turning away he said: "Sit on him, he might hurt himself."

Among the prisoners at the Yorkville Court yesterday morning were five gorgeously attired young women, who had attracted attention at the Academy. They were Allie Goodwin, 22 years old; Leo Holt, 18 years old; Cyren Perry, 18 years; Gertie Whitley, 20 years old, and Mabel Rice, 19 years old. The prisoners were dressed in fancy costumes and among the dirt begrimmed vagrants on each side of them. One of the young women wore a long pair of hand-painted kid gloves, a blue silk train dress which she held under one arm and long pointed shoes with enormous high heels. Another had a bright red camel hair's cloak about her shoulders, and a very brief ballet dress and checkerboard stockings with low slippers. Still another was dressed in the style of the Elizabethian age, with a high, frilled collar, a very low-necked and short-sleeved dress and powdered hair.

Mabel Rice, the first prisoner examined, was dressed in green silk tights in the costume of a page. Around her neck and arms and on her fingers blazed diamonds of all sizes and settings. She was still under the influence of champagne, and smiled wearily at the court officers about her. Justice White cast his eye over the extraordinary array of diamonds and silks before him, and finally catching the smile upon the face of the page, said:

"What does this mean?"

"French ball, your honor."

"What were you doing that made the officer arrest you?"

"A little fun, your honor."

"Yes, I know. But what were you doing?"

"Well, Gertie put a chalk mark on the wall and said we couldn't reach up to it with our foot. Then we kept putting it up higher. We stood back to the crowd and weren't doing anything when we were taken in."

"You had been drinking, too, hadn't you?"

"Of course, we had some champagne."

"And you were 'kicking hats', too, weren't you?"

"No—we—were—not."

"Well, I'll fine you $10 for intoxication because the champagne is still in your head. I don't know that there's any law against kicking a chalk line. The others may go."

Mabel tripped gaily down into the cell and remarked it was a shame for a poor girl with $7,000 worth of diamonds to be held in jail because she could not pay a fine of $10. A messenger was sent off and in about an hour a young man with a high silk hat and gold cane arrived, paid the fine and took the green page away in his carriage.

A DOMESTIC ROMANCE.

It was daylight when Edward Williams Odell, agent and son of Superintendent Odell of the Stonington steamboat, left the Academy of Music in company with Lilly Williams. He saw her to the steps of her boarding house, 250 West Fourteenth street, and left her there. She did not wish to enter the house alone, and followed Odell to his father's house, 23 Bank street, reaching the door as soon as he did. He opened the door and shut it with haste, leaving her standing outside. She pulled the bell three times, when Anthony M. Allire, a brother-in-law of Odell, put his head out of the window and asked the young woman what she wanted. Her request to see Ed Odell was answered with a command to go away from the door. As she still stood there, Allire called upon Officer Payfe of the Ninth Precinct to arrest her. At Jefferson Market, later in the day, Mr. Allire made a charge of disorderly conduct against the woman, and she was fined $10. No one came to offer the money, so she was locked up. Her neat and ladylike appearance caused Justice Duffy to inquire further into her case. She told him that she was Mrs. Wm. McDougal, 24 years old; had been reared in Rutland, Vt., and was married four years ago McDougal, who was a machinist in Providence, R. I. They moved to Chicago, where they lived for a while together and then returned to Providence. She made the acquaintance of Odell, who was purser of the steamer Naragansett, left her husband, and had been living with Odell for the past two years. The young woman said that the people in the house on Fourteenth street were of the opinion that he is her husband, and that is why she wanted him to see her upstairs. A few days ago Odell told her that he had to leave her, as his father was sick. After he left the house she tried to find him, and did not succeed. It occurred to her that he would go to the French ball.

"I wonder that you would leave your husband and live with a gambler," remarked the Justice.

"But, Judge, he was not not always a gambler, and he treated me right."

"Well, did you find him at the ball?"

"I did, and remained with him til nearly 6 o'clock this morning, when he saw me to my boarding-house. He left me at the door, when he should have come up-stairs, as all the people in the house think he is my husband. I followed him to his house, and made no noise at all, and was not drunk."

"Where is your husband now?"

"He's in Brooklyn."

"Don't you want him to support you?"

"No. He is not what he was. He knows that I am here, but I will have nothing to do with him."

The young woman promised she would not go near Odell's house, and was discharged.

Edmond M. Lawrence, a drummer for a clothing house, willingly paid a fine of $50 before Justice O'Rielly at the Toombs. His fun was worth that, he said. He had met at the ball two of the merriest damsels, who made him laugh all night. Detective Sergeant Heidelbergh went over and told him not to act so boisterously. "What had he to say?" Lawrence asked indignantly. Heidelbergh produced his shield, but the man said he didn't care for that or him either. He had come there for fun and was going to have it; no eight-carat detective could stop him. He then began dancing around the floor like a madman, urging his female companions to join him. Then the detective arrested him and locked him up at police headquarters, and took him to court in the morning. He paid his fine and departed.

FIRE AMONG FURNITURE.

A $50,000 Blaze in the Peters' Factory Last Night.

The alarm from box 245 at 6:30 last night was for a big fire in factory No. 2 of Peters' Furniture Company, No. 1433 North Fifteenth street. The factory, which is a branch, is a three-story brick building, 150x135 feet. A large court, 100 feet square, forms a quadrangle and makes practically four buildings of the one. The flames were seen issuing from the north section and the engines were soon on the scene, but as the fire had gained great headway from the inflammable material, a general alarm was given. Several companies occupied the inner court, from which streams were turned toward the four walls. The absence of fire plugs within the quadrangle and the extra distance the hose had to be carried interfered seriously with effective work, as did also the vast volumes of stifling smoke thrown out by heaps of varnish and woody refuse piled up on the different floors. After three and a half hours' work the fire was sufficiently under control to enable the department to return to their quarters with the satisfaction of having confined the flames to the north side, in which nearly all the damage was done, although the smoke and water caused some injury in the other wings.

The origin of the fire cannot be explained, as Mr. Peters and two employes had left the structure but a few minutes before. The first floors of the north wing contained the machinery and it was there the greatest loss was sustained. The Salvage Corps attempted to protect all the goods at first, but were compelled to abandon the efforts in several instances after losing over a dozen tarpaulins. Mr. Peters places his total loss at about $15,000 on the building, and $30,000 on the stock. The insurance on the building and machinery amounted to $35,700, on the factory stock to $17,000, and on the stock in the warehouse to $21,000.

NANTICOKE'S CALAMITY.

A Board of Arbitrators to Consider the Plan of Search for the Entombed Men.

NEW YORK, January 20.—The following special to the Times was sent from Nanticoke, Pa., last night: To-morrow a board of arbitrators, composed of intelligent and practical miners, selected by the relatives of the men and boys entombed in No. 1 slope, will meet here to make a personal inspection of the mine and to decide if the efforts which the company are making to recover the bodies are proper ones. If they decide not, and so order, a shaft will at once be sunk to reach that portion of the mine where the imprisoned ones are. This action is rendered necessary by so many reports being scattered that the company was not pushing the work of recovery rapidly. The work, however, has been put forward as speedily as safety would allow, and in the four weeks passed since the calamity, over 1,200 feet of debris has been passed through in the gangway, leaving about 1,000 feet yet to penetrate to reach the entombed men. The possibility of the prisoners yet being alive and subsisting on mule meat has urged the men on in their work considerably, it being admitted that such a thing might be by reason of the men being in a place sufficiently high as to be beyond the reach of the rush of quicksand. The air passages leading into the workings do not appear obstructed, the quicksand having settled sufficiently to allow the air to circulate freely. Every citizen is anxiously awaiting the important developments which are expected this week, and the interest in the matter is now almost as great as at the time of the dreadful calamity.

ROSE COGHLAN.

AN INTERESTING CHAT WITH THE ACCOMPLISHED ARTISTE.

Why She Left Mr. Wallack's Company—Her Plans for the Future—The Shakspearean Drama—The Cornish Dialect in "Our Joan."

The hydrophobia scare has not penetrated the artistic atmosphere which surrounds Rose Coghlan, or rather, to be more exact, Mrs. Rose Coghlan Edgerly, as her recent matrimonial combination with the young Boston lawyer and graduate of Harvard, Mr. Clinton J. Edgerly, has made her name. The first greeting that the representative of the POST-DISPATCH received from the apartment of the star at the Southern when he called yesterday, was a series of big, vicious barks from a little, bit of a dog about the size of a full-grown rat. The bark was some ten or a dozen times larger than the dog, and if the latter had been hidden, it would have aroused expectation of an exciting meeting with a mastiff or a healthy bull dog. The little animal is a kind of protector of the artiste, whose place her husband has not yet entirely taken, and won't allow anyone to go near her without a vigorous protest. It serves as a sort of body-guard in the dressing-room of her theater.

Miss Coghlan had just risen from an after-luncheon nap and was dressed in a charming blue satin costume, just a little neglige, as if she still wanted to be easy and comfortable before going on duty.

"I am nearly worn out with traveling and just rid of the last remnants of Pittsburg which I brought with me in my hair," said she laughingly touching the brown masses which fell carelessly over her shoulders, "and I am suffering from a terrible cold and with the last struggle of the Pittsburg grip."

It is easy to understand why Rose Coghlan should take the part of Joan Trevenna naturally and easily. One of the first things that strikes one is her personality, which may be almost described as aggressive, it is so strongly marked, and seems to pervade her. She is a robust and vigorous type of womanhood and her individuality is noticeable in every movement and word. This is positive and self-assertive, not to the point of egotism, nor does it show itself in any unpleasant way, but it can not fail to be marked from the first. She has a strong face indicative of decision and strength of character as if she might be a polished Joan, lacking her uncouthness and masculinity of manner.

"THIS IS MY FIRST APPEARANCE in St. Louis, although there seems to be an impression to the contrary, but I have never been here. When Mr. Wallack's company was here I was not connected with it. It was during a season when I was off for a while. I have only played at Chicago and San Francisco outside of New York and the larger Eastern cities, but at Pittsburg, I noticed that one of the critics kindly said that I showed much improvement since my last visit there."

"Do you like traveling?"

"Oh, it is a little hard; especially was this last trip so, but I do not object to it and I am glad to be out of a stock company and to learn about the world on the road."

"How did you happen to leave Mr. Wallack?"

"Well, you know I have never starred and I thought it was about time that I should do something for myself. I do not think Mr. Wallack treated me exactly right. You know, with the exception of one year, I have been leading lady of his theater since 1876. I came over and played there in 1873, and then after going back to England, returned, and have been there since. Mr. Wallack never gave me a chance and never did anything for me beyond paying my salary, and although my salary was a large one, my expenses were just as heavy, and even heavier, than on the road, I had so many dresses to buy and the work was just as hard. I never missed a day at the theater, rehearsing and preparing for the performance of the evening. I think I am entitled to the privilege of starring, as much so as any who are at it. I have served my apprenticeship faithfully and I think I may regard myself as a graduate. This seemed to be about as good a time as any to start. I do not want to remain on the stage all my life. I want to retire and enjoy life some myself. I want to give Mr. Edgerly a chance to follow his career as a lawyer, he is one you know," she added, with a mischievous look at that gentleman and a caressing tap on his shoulder. "He is likely to get some practice now, because Mr. Wallack has a suit against me for $5,000. I only give myself three years to star in and make a reputation and fortune over the country. Cannot I do it in that time?" she asked, with a smile.

"It was reported that you were to play a repertoire on your tour?"

"I concluded it was best not to. It is far more trouble than to have one play and I think 'Our Joan' is enough. It seems to suit the people and I like the character for myself. I do not like the play altogether as it is, especially the latter part, but the most of it I think is capital. It has been said that Joan is uncouth, but it is just what the lines and the idea of the author call for and is what I think the girl would be under the circumstances. Don't you think so?" This appeal was irresistible. Miss Coghlan has a way of taking one into her confidence and asking opinions in an appealing way which is winning and flattering. "I do not think I could do anything else, and I believe it is right and pleases most of the critics. I would like to have a little more of the society element in it because that is my forte. I do not like emotion, nor do I like to express it. I like high comedy or intense tragedy and they suit me best. I look upon the second act of "Our Joan" as immensely clever, and no one but Mr. Merrivale could have written it."

"Will you give nothing but "Our Joan" this season?"

THE SHAKSPEAREAN DRAMA.

"Nothing else, I think, but that is enough. I have a plan which I think is a good one. I want to give 'Twelfth Night' in adequate manner, mounted in artistic and magnificent style. I believe that Shakspearean plays will take if they are given proper treatment, the kind of treatment which lots of modern trash receives and wins by. People won't have them with signs up to indicate scenes. The greatest of dramatic writers deserves it, and I believe the public want it. 'Twelfth Night' is admirably adapted to spectacular treatment and handsome mounting, much more so than 'Comedy of Errors.' Viola is the part of the play and I think I can play Viola. I played it in England with immense success when it was produced spectacularly by Captain Alfred Thompson who designed and produced the 'Comedy of Errors.' In the provincial town of Manchester it ran for the unparalleled time of three months without a stop. I was complimented handsomely on my Viola. My ambition lies in the direction of the Shakspearean drama—I mean for the strong intense characters. I played a round of them including Lady Macbeth with Barry Sullivan before I was 21 years of age, and received high praise for my work."

"You played Juliet, you know, too, with success," suggested Mr. Edgerly.

"Don't mention that," she said, with a laugh, "I believe the women who look Juliet cannot act the part, and those who can act it, don't look it."

The artiste's dialect in "Our Joan" has been noticed. It is very slight, and simply gives a quaint twang to her speeches. This is not because Miss Coghlan cannot speak Cornish, but because the dialect is too broad for use. She spent a summer once on the Cornish coast, and learned to talk with the benighted inhabitants in capital style, and since taking "Our Joan" has studied up in dialect so that she has it on her tongue's end. "But," said she, "the dialect is too broad and unintelligible; listen:" She rattled off a sentence which sounded like a combination of Chinese and low Dutch. "It would never do to talk in that style. The Cornish people speak a dialect which is nearly like the original Celtic, and is nearly as hard as Welch to understand, so for Joan I made up a dialect of my own, which is an improvement on the original."

When the reporter took his leave "Our Joan" shot a good-by in broad West-of-England language, which gave him food for a week's hard study with a dialect dictionary.

Senator Wood on Cockrell's Chances.

State Senator J. P. Wood of New London, Mo., is at the Laclede. He says that the people of his district are not troubling themselves very much over the chances of Cockrell succeeding himself, but that they are particularly anxious to elect Judge Brace of Macon County to the Supreme bench of the State next fall to succeed Judge Henry.

Railroad Extension.

A meeting of prominent citizens and business men of Southeast Missouri was held at the Planters' House this morning, to take action relative to the extension of the Salem branch of the Iron Mountain Road to Poplar Bluff. There were present State Senator Yancey of Piedmont; Jepp Boyd of Thayer, Oregon County; ex-Sheriff Harrison, County Clerk January and Circuit Clerk Sutton of Reynolds County, and others. The meeting was held with closed doors, but it is understood that a course of action was decided upon and that a conference with the railroad officials will be held to-morrow.

THE RATE WAR.

President Garrett of the Baltimore and Ohio Explains the True Inwardness.

NEW YORK, January 20.—The Herald this morning publishes an interview with President Garrett, of the Baltimore and Ohio. Mr. Garrett said: "No Trunk line resisted longer or more vigorously the growing demoralization in rates, or has striven harder since September last to bring about a restoration of harmony between Trunk lines and stability in changes for transportation, both freight and passenger, than the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. The passenger rates now in force on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington to the West, were established on May 24, 1885, not by the Baltimore and Ohio Company, but by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, after the trains of the Baltimore and Ohio Company had been excluded for more than six months from New York and Philadelphia, during which six months the Baltimore and Ohio Company made no effort to disturb rates at Philadelphia or New York, and rigidly maintained the rates at Baltimore and Washington. The reduction imposed upon it without cause by its competitor at Baltimore and Washington had the effect of materially reducing the Baltimore and Ohio's revenue. The Baltimore and Ohio Company was compelled to accept these rates, and it has merely adhered to them from that day to this, declining, it is true, to advance from them on December 1, when rates were increased by all other lines, for the good and sufficient reason that it was invited to enter a pool with merely a nominal membership and without possible facilities for receiving proper benefits therefrom. The Baltimore and Ohio Company is not, and never has been, an advocate of cut rates or instability in charges for transportation. Its managers, who are far more largely interested financially in its property than those of any other trunk line, believe that such stability is the most important feature in the commercial situation and are so firm in this belief that they prefer National legislation if uniform, stable and equitable rates, fair alike to the shareholders of railway property and to the public, which can not otherwise be secured."

Position of the Pool Lines.

NEW YORK, January 20.—The Tribune says this morning: "The position of the pool lines seems to be this: No object would be gained by reducing west-bound passenger rates to the Baltimore and Ohio basis, for the latter road would immediately make a further reduction. The through passenger traffic to the West is light at this season, and the loss of business to the weaker pool lines is small, while if a reduction was made the roads would simply waste their money and run the risk of demoralizing fares. By holding together and ignoring the Baltimore and Ohio cut, the latter road, it is thought, will soon get tired of its present policy. If any more serious development occurs later there will be time to take action. It is not likely that even second-class fares will come down. The Baltimore and Ohio is working up as much New England business as possible, as the pool there is in a less stable condition than that at New York."

I Had a Dreadful Cough,

This was the case of a man with consumption arising from liver complaint. He recovered his health completely by the use of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Thousands of others bear similar testimony.

THE SANTA FE RING.

It Still Runs the Territory of New Mexico.

C. H. Blackwell of Socorro. N. M., arrived at the Laclede this morning. To a POST-DISPATCH reporter he said that the unusual severity of the weather in Western Kansas and Eastern Colorado has caused the death of thousands of range cattle. "There is no way of affording the cattle protection," said he, "and most of the calves and young cows succumbed to the cold, only the most hardy animals pulling through."

Mr. Blackwell was of the opinion that the effort being made in New Mexico to defeat the confirmation of Governor Ross would be unsuccessful. While the Governor was slow and a trifle behind the times, yet his integrity has never been impeached. The old Santa Fe ring, he said, still controlls the politics of the Territory. The ring is all powerful, whether in office or out, and its influence is exerted and felt in every department of Territorial affairs.

DUFFY'S PURE MALT WHISKEY.

The New and Unfailing Formula.

THE DUFFY MALT WHISKEY COMPANY has had prepared for it, by a great German scientist, with special care, a formula which is a sure and positive cure for CONSUMPTION, and which can be prepared by any family housekeeper (raw beefsteak and DUFFY'S PURE MALT WHISKEY being of the ingredients). This formula will be sent, under seal of the company, to any person afflicted with Consumption, and using our whiskey, free of charge upon receipt of a two-cent stamp. It is equally valuable for INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA and recovery from WASTING DISEASES. The demand for it is universal, its efficacy is pronounced and curative, and the testimonials to its virtue are numerous beyond mention. All inquiries concerning the Formula and the use of our whiskey in any disease, will be cheerfully answered by our Medical Department.

SKOWHEGAN, MAINE.
Gentlemen—Respecting the trial of your Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and consumption cure, I think there was a marked improvement upon the patient in every symptom; appetite improved, cough loose, expectoration easier, blowing sound much better, pulse 83, respiration 22, digestion greatly improved. I have not the least doubt your remedy is a most valuable one in all wasting diseases, and shall use it in all cases when it is indicated.
Respectfully, DR. JOHN R. HILL.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., (222 S. 9th St.)
Gentlemen—I am using your Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as a medicine in my practice for lung affections. I have often prescribed it, and think it is the best tonic and stimulant.
DR. E. W. FARROW.

MR. JOHN C. GROSS, Riverside, N. J., writes: "After using and trying almost everything, Cod-Liver Oil, Beef Tea and many other medicines, without gain in strength or health; have been suffering for over two years, from Consumption, Hemorrhages, Malaria, and Dyspepsia. I took as my last refuge your Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and I am much stronger and better."

MR. PHILIP O'CONNELL, 176 E. 85th St., New York City, writes: "I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs four months ago, and have also had asthma. Concerning the effect of your formula and Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, the benefits derived from their use has been far beyond my expectations. Since taking them have gained greatly in strength with almost complete relief."

MR. SAMUEL S. STODDARD, 82 Broadway, New York, writes: "I have used the formula and will take pleasure in recommending your Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. As a medicine, I think it is unexcelled. My son has used both for his lungs, as directed, and it has been of decided benefit to him. I know of no reason why you will not succeed in doing an immense amount of good, and I will recommend your whiskey to every one."

MRS. JOSEPHINE CHOYS, 617 New Jersey avenue, Washington, D. C., writes: "I purchased a bottle of your Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and have used only a portion of it. It has done more good than the eight bottles of Cod Liver Oil I have taken. I have had a cough for three years, and will continue to use it. Please send your formula.

MR. T. B. WOLF, 1829 Darien St., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "Allow me to say that your formula is just as represented; have been using it with your Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for my lungs with marked effect and have been entirely relieved."

MR. GEORGE D. HART, 60 Carpenter Street, Chicago, Ill., writes: "I had been suffering from hemorrhages of the lungs for six years, and have spent large sums. I was advised to use your valuable formula and Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I wish to say for the benefit of those suffering from hemorrhages, that I am entirely cured and feel like a new man."

THE CIVIL COURTS.

TROUBLE CAUSED BY A LOADED CIGAR IN THE HUSCH FAMILY.

An Evening Fireside Scene Disturbed by an Explosion—Application for a Receiver—A Wife's Answer and Cross-Bill—New Suits and Matters in Litigation To-Day.

The trial of a somewhat remarkable damage case is set for a jury before Judge Dillon today. John and Bertha Husch, a young German couple, entered a suit against John Nolde, a cigar dealer, claiming $5,000 damages for mental and bodily suffering endured by Mrs. Husch under peculiar circumstances. Her husband on his way home from business the evening of November 11, dropped in at Nolde's cigar store and purchased two cigars for 5 cents. He placed them in his pocket, intending to smoke after dinner at home. He states that having disposed of a comfortable meal he ensconced himself in an easy chair before the fire toasting his feet and perusing the POST-DISPATCH. His wife came into the room and perched herself upon his knee, as she had a perfect right to do under the statute. She placed her face against his and they both looked over the POST-DISPATCH in that position.

Mr. Hirsch then thought of his cigar to complete the domestic picture of ease and comfort at the fireside. He placed a match to one of the cigars purchased of Nolde, and his wife went on reading the paper. Suddenly the weed exploded, and Mrs. Husch was so shocked that she fell back. Her husband caught her in his arms, but she fainted; and the scare so unnerved her in her delicate condition at that time that he had to put her to bed. For several days she suffered greatly and a miscarriage was the result. Damages in the sum mentioned are claimed on the ground that the cigar-dealer had knowledge that cigars in his stock were loaded. He entered a general denial.

Mrs. Husch is a young, good-looking woman of the German type, with brown hair and dark blue eyes and a pleasing expression. Her husband is a tonsorial artist. There are several witnesses in the case. Mr. Joseph Jecko appears for Mrs. Husch. The cigar dealer is represented by Mr. Franklin Ferris.

Mrs. Nixon's Cross-Bill.

An amended answer and cross-bill was filed to-day in court by Mrs. Fannie Nixon in the suit for divorce brought by her husband, J. B. Nixon. She denies emphatically that at any time during her marriage she ever did anything that would bring shame upon her family and children. She denies that an improper intimacy existed with the person named in her husband's petition or that she frequented places of amusement with other men, coming home at all hours of the night and refusing to account for her absence. Mrs. Nixon denies that she ever permitted male visitors to enter her sleeping apartment. She declares that her husband is a vagrant in the eyes of the law, for the reason that for a year past he has failed and refused to provide for the support of his family, although well able to do so. She asks for a decree, the custody of the children and for alimony.

The Guernsey-Scudder Light Company.

An article was placed on record this morning changing the name of the Guernsey and Scudder Electric Light Company to the Guernsey-Scudder Electric Light Company. There is also an amendment providing for five directors of the company in lieu of three, and the capital stock is increased from $13,000 to $65,000.

A Receiver Wanted.

A petition for the appointment of a receiver was filed to-day in court by Edward Wilkerson against the John Burn's Publishing Company. The petitioner holds notes of indebtedness to the extent of $900 and he alleges that the company is insolvent; that its assets amount to $14,000 and its in liabilities to $16,000. He wants a receiver appointed with a view to an equal distribution of the assets among the creditors.

A Contest Abated.

The contested election suit of the late City Treasurer Jacob S. Merrell against Treasurer Espenchied, was called up this morning in Circuit Court No. 3. The death of Mr. Merrell was suggested and the court ordered the following entry: "Contest abated."

The Conover Case.

The City Marshal in the Conover habeas corpus proceeding has filed a return or answer in Judge Thayer's court setting forth that he holds Conover in the calaboose under a fine of $100 imposed upon him in the Police Court. The matter will be argued later in the day. It involves the acceptance of an appeal bond.

Legal Notes.

An order of delivery of household effects issued from the Circuit Court to-day in favor of W. J. Dickey against S. H. Brandon, Wm. Chapman, Ed Chapman and S. W. Davis.

A confession of judgment was entered today by John Hennessey in favor of R. J. Hayes for $1,702.25.

W. H. Lee, as administrator of James A. Hardy, has entered suit on notes against A. J. P. Garesche, Sr.

The Wilson case against the 'Frisco Railway Company and the Seligmans, involving the transfer of the Seligman stock to Wilson on the 'Frisco books was submitted to-day in Judge Thayer's court.

Judge Thayer, after hearing the evidence in the Wilson case to-day, dived into the testimony in the Morse contested divorce case, particulars of which have already been published in the POST-DISPATCH.

HORSE PLAY.

Fred G. Maeder's New Play, "Eloped with a Circus Man."

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

PHILADELPHIA, January 20.—Many years have elapsed since a theater stage was transformed into a circus, but the metamorphosis was witnessed at the Chestnut Street Theater Sunday when the play "Eloped with a Circus Man" was produced to a fair-sized audience. It would be a difficult task to assign the piece to any particular category. Fred G. Maeder, in writing it, appears to have endeavored to cap the climax of horse play by introducing the horses themselves, and succeeds in bringing out a real live circus company. Mr. Grath, who is better known on the variety stage as Mr. Mack, a comedian and dancer, is the light comedian of the company and assumes the part of Brutus Plantaganet, a crushed tragedian. The first act introduces a musical and farcical performance at the dizzy Electric Hotel, winding up with the elopement of the landlord's daughter with Master Julian, a circus rider. In the second act there is a regular circus ring performance in a country side show, with horses, clowns, acrobats, trick donkeys, tumbling, fancy riding by Robert Stickney and Daisy Belmont, leaping by William Dutton, Davenport Brothers, and other well-known performers in the sawdust arena. The audience gave vent to appreciative demonstrations. "Eloped with a Circus Man" will continue all the week.

The Percheron Breeders' Offer.

The Fair Association are in receipt of a proposition from the American Percheron Horse Breeders' Association. The horse breeders propose to give $5,000 this coming fall in premiums for stallions, mares, colts and fillies, the meeting to be held on the grounds of the fair that shall add the largest sum to this purse of $5,000, the whole to be devoted to premiums. The meeting would prove a very interesting exhibit, and the St. Louis Fair Association will make a strong effort to secure the attraction.

HOW WOMEN TEMPER JUSTICE.

Their Wrongs Make Them Fierce, but Love Makes Them Merciful.

From the Pittsburg Times.

"It is a singular fact," said Mayor's Clerk McCleary, "but nevertheless true that nine out of every ten women who have their husbands arrested, or make information against them for cruelty, either withdraw the charge or pay the fine. Only last week we had a case of a man who was habitually drunk and known as a wife-beater. The wife brought suit and then wanted to withdraw it, but was not allowed to do so, as some of the neighbors told us that it would be a blessing if the man was sent to the Work House. The man was fined $10 and costs, or thirty days. Now after that woman and a number of neighbors had testified to the many acts of cruelty, the dutiful wife paid the fine. She had not a cent in the world, but said when she paid over the money that she had borrowed it from fourteen of her neighbors, in one case getting only 25 cents. There were tears in her eyes, but I don't know what caused them. They miget have been shed on account of parting with the money, and it might be that she was sorry her husband was going home with her. There's no telling what a woman will do."

At the Central Station a few nights ago a woman had her husband locked up for beating her. She followed with the officers, and when the iron doors closed with a bang she changed completely and begged piteously that he be allowed to go home with her. Her cries were not heeded. At the hearing the next morning she was present, and the payment of a $10 fine for the man that had struck her seemed to please her as much as a new toy does a child. The police officers are always very careful about arresting a man who is complained of by his wife, for the woman will seldom appear against him.

"Never interfere in a family quarrel," said an old officer. "The only time I was ever beaten was through trying to save a woman from being beaten by her husband. It was on the South Side. I was passing along the street and heard the shrieks of a woman. In the yard in the rear of a house was a big Irishman beating his wife. I jumped over the fence and dragged the man off and handled him pretty roughly, as he fought me. As soon as the woman realized that her husband was in the clutches of an officer she came at me, and between both man and woman I was badly beaten and my uniform ruined. Never interfere in a family quarrel until it is reasonably certain that one of the parties is too far gone to fight you."

Once in a long while the usual order of things will be changed, as it was on the South Side on Monday. A woman named Magee was arrested at the instance of her husband, who said she was continually drunk and that he could do nothing with her. The man begged Alderman Flach to give his wife a long term, so she would get good and sober. At the hearing the man told how his wife got drunk and abused him. So the Alderman gave her thirty days at the Work House. Magee departed perfectly satisfied, but a couple of hours later returned and begged for the release of his wife. It was too late, however, and nothing could be done, for she had been received at Claremont.

Advice to Young Girls.

From the Scottish-American Journal.

A lady of intelligence and observation has remarked: "I wish I could impress upon the minds of the girls that the chief end of woman is not to marry young." If girls could only be brought to believe that the chances for a happy marriage were better after 25 than before there would be much less misery in the world than there now is. To be sure they might not have so many opportunities to marry as before, but as they do not need to marry but one at a time it is necessary that one should be satisfactory. As a girl grows older, if she thinks at all she certainly becomes more capable of judging what would make her happy than when younger. How many girls of 20 would think of marrying the man they would gladly have married at 16? At 30 a woman, who is somewhat independent and not overanxious to marry, is much harder to please and more careful in her choice than one at 20. There is good reason for this. Her mind has improved with her years, and she now looks beyond mere appearances in judging men. She is apt to ask if this man who is so very polite in company is really kind-hearted. Do his polite actions spring from a happy, genial nature, or is his attractive demeanor put on for the occasion and laid off at home as he lays off his coat? A very young girl takes it for granted that men are always as she sees them in society—polite, friendly, and on their good behavior. If she marries early the man who happens to please her fancy, she learns to her sorrow that in nine cases out of ten a man in society and a man at home are widely different beings. Five years at that period of life produces a great change in opinions and feelings. We frequently come to detest at 25 what we admired at 16. We advance from the taffy-candy and peanut age to the era of gum-drops and marroons glaces, and even in later years lose our yearnings.

A PRETTY PET,

AND THE MONEY IT COSTS TO KEEP THE THING UP.

A New York Setter that Has Won All the Prizes to Be Won and Is Now Resting on His Laurels—An Interesting Chat with the Owner—The Daly and Zachritz Set-To—Sporting News.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

NEW PORK, January 20.—"Down, Punch! Charge!" A magnificent setter stretched himself at length on a Turkish rug in the artistic den of a young man in one of the bachelor apartment-houses up town, when this command was kindly but firmly given. The long, graceful nose fell between two perfect paws, and the silken hair from the two delicate ears mingled gracefully with the waving lemon and white silken coat that had so often been patted and admired by handsome women. Punch was a prize-winner and a famous dog in his class. He had traveled far and wrested prizes, under a far more aristocratic name from pets of blue grass beauties, from the admired canine friends of brunette Baltimorians, from the parlor-hunters of haughty Philadelphians and from the four-footed companions of cultured Bostonians. Odd corners of the den of the owner of this intelligent and beautiful brute bore evidences of Punch's prowess in bench shows. Goblets, cups and figures that could be classified under no general name; bronzes, medals in gold and silver and bronze, and ribbons of various colors with the two words which so delight the owner of such a dog, "first prizes," were everywhere about. They overshadowed the bits of bric-a-brac and mingled on terms of equality with hand-painted fans, and of bits of embroidery on silk and satin that dainty hands had wrought for Punch's owner. The young man proudly patted his dog, as he said, pointing to the various bits of plate:

"This was won at St. Louis, that at Louisville, that one in the corner at New Orleans, that massive cup here in this city and that grotesque bit in Boston."

And the list of cities where bench shows are held only served to exhaust the prize bits, and some cities had to be named a number of times.

"It must be a source of great gratification to own a dog with such capabilities as a prize-winner?"

"Yes, and also a source of much expense—vastly more expense than profit. I might give up my dog and money and save money by the operation. Sealskin sacques, diamonds and silk dresses are less costly than a champion dog. One gets to love him like a child, though, for he is so faithful and intelligent and such a source of comfort. But a wife and child could hardly be combined as a source of more trouble and anxiety."

The statement was a strong one and hardly comprehensible to one who thinks only of a dog as a companion and friend. Naturally, then, the listeners asked about the causes which led to a dog being so expensive.

"First, then," said the young man, caressing Punch, "he is as great an expense as a child, because he has to have a governor, and it's just as necessary to him as a governess is to a baby. Why? Because when I'm away at business I can't leave him in my room, and it wouldn't do to take him down town. So that smart young colored fellow you see about the building, and probably take for a janitor, devotes his day to caring for Punch. That costs more than a governess who can teach French and music. If you don't believe it try and get so good a fellow as Billy is and see what he will charge you for keeping your dog from being stolen or poisoned and from running away."

It was rather startling to think of a special attendant for a dog, but he was well worth the watching. "But the expense certainly couldn't be great after this attendant," suggested one of the party.

"Bless your dear hearts, thats only the beginning of the expense," said he of experience. Punch lazily arose, stretched his perfect legs, laid his nose on his master's knee and if ever affection was shown it fairly shot out from the speaking eyes that spoke volumes to the admiring owner. "Yes, old fellow, your an expensive luxury, but I'd give up everything rather than you, after all. When you were a pup," he said, speaking at the dog, "I paid in all $100 to have you trained for hunting, but in an evil hour a dog fancier told me that you were a sure prize-winner and so, fellows, I caught that fever, and never but once have I fired a gun over him. Why, bless me, he's got an appetite like a big twelve-pound baby, and it costs about as much to feed him as to feed myself. Dieting is a necessity not only to his existence but to the silkiness of his hair, the perfection of color, and to the continuance of just that form and weight that makes him competent to pick out the best of the silverware at the shows. And doctors' bills, I don't know whether it's the dieting that does it, but for some reason or other Punch needs to visit a doctor about once a week, or I think he does, and it amounts to the same thing, and my dog's doctor rather encourages what I suppose is an insane delusion on my part. Have any of you any idea how many silk dresses that one item would buy? If you haven't, just ruminate on it for a time. Then there are traveling expenses to various shows for Punch—who then travels under his aristocratic kennel register name—and his attendant, and too often for myself; hotel bills and the mental worry about the poor fellow's safety and comfort, which is really worse than all the other outlay, for I can hardly sleep when he is away from me. These are a few of the important items of expense. Add the incidentals for grooming, collars, kennel and board, and you can begin to get some idea of what my luxury in the way of one dog costs me. And the return for the outlay is a heap of comfort in looking at and talking to him, a wealth of affection that woman could give me no more constantly and a lot of medals and other truck in the way of first prizes that are really of no earthly use and of but little intrinsic value. I can put them to any use, I can sell them to pay Punch's expenses. But I've got to have them and that settles it. When a man has a first prize dog he'll spend $100 to get a $10 prize, and I'm just fool enough to do it."

"But then you must find a lot of comfort hunting over the dog," said the sportsman of the party.

"Hunting!" this in a tone of infinite disgust as its owner pushed Punch's nose from its resting place on his knee. "Hunt, why, I took him out once and he pointed at; the Lord only knows what, I don't, and I hunted a half hour in the brush for game that didn't exist. That's the only disappointment about Punch. He got a good nose for a bench show, but it won't find game, and in a field trial he would be distanced, as all bench winners are, by some onery dog with a coarse coat, stubby nose, a bad back and legs that would throw a Kennel Club judge into convulsions. If I want a hunter, I'll leave Punch with his guardian and go out into the street and hunt up some homeless cur to take into the field with me rather than take the winner of all those glittering cups and gaudy ribbons. I'll stand a chance of getting some game then. Lets change the subject."

Daly-Zachritz.

Charles Daly and Will Zachritz sparred five rounds last night at a local resort. Zachritz was the heavier of the two, weighing 155 pounds to Daly's 140. The match was for a purse of $50, and after some pretty scientific hitting on both sides the referee, Joe Ganey, decided the match a draw, afterwards changing it in Daly's favor. The sparring was rather light and with five-ounce gloves.

English Yachts to Compete.

NEW YORK, January 20.—At a meeting of the American Yacht Club last night, it was said that two English steam yachts would compete in the spring regatta.

Lucas Secures Myers.

Mr. Lucas arrived in the city last night from New York, and brought with him the information that he had secured from the Committee the services of Myers of the Buffaloes. The catcher is at present in Buffalo, and he will be signed, Mr. Lucas says, as soon as the papers can be forwarded on to him. The meeting in New York was a remarkably interesting one, and a great deal of business was transacted which was not given out. The report that Cincinnati will be the club from the West which is to be taken into the League is faulty, the laws of the League being such as to preclude its admission. The cities applying, therefore, are narrowed down to Indianapolis and Kansas City, and as the selection is left entirely with the Western members, it will be perfectly safe to predict that Kansas City will be the eighth club added to those already in the League.

Municipal Assembly.

The council met last evening. Mr. Devoy introduced anew the the Iron Mountain Surface Road bill. A number of house bills were given a first reading.

The West End Company's gas bill was reported for passage and 100 copies ordered printed. A bill fixing the time for the completion of the St. Louis Transfer Road as eighteen months from the time of the passage of the amended ordinance was passed. Adjourned to next Tuesday.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Meeting of the Cook County Association—The Release of Editor Stead.

CHICAGO, January 20.—At the monthly meeting of the Cook County Woman's Suffrage Society, a paper was read by Mrs. Ahrens on the subject of "Women, the Moral Protector of Man." Speeches were made by Senator Castle, W. S. Herbert, Major W. F. Singleton and others on the question of suffrage as viewed from the different standpoints of educational qualification, school suffrage, etc. The officers of the society were empowered to meet with the officials of other woman's associations of the city with a view to forming a committee to take measures for the protection of young girls who come to the city in search of work.

The following resolution by Mrs. Singleton was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the release of Mr. Wm. J. Stead, the English martyr to the cause of social purity, is in itself a source of profound gratification to us, but we rejoice chiefly in the fact that it was compelled by a popular demand, which those criminals in high places, who had deliberated perverted the forms of justice to wreak vengeance upon a man of purest principles, dared not disregard.

IRISH NATIONAL LEAGUE.

INVADING THE EAST.

The Illinois Central Road as a Competitor for Eastern Business.

CHICAGO, ILL., January 20.—A morning paper says: The Illinois Central Railway is in the field as a competitor for Eastern business, delivering its freight to the Big Four and the Chesapeake and Ohio. Within the last two days a large amount of corn has been secured and shipped from Chicago over this new route and there are apprehensions that the movement in that direction will grow into formidable proportions. The pool lines are considerably exercised over this new development, as it means an outlet that cannot be controlled either at Chicago or at the seaboard.

GEORGIA PROHIBITION.

The Anti-Prohibitionists to Appeal and Employ Roscoe Conkling.

NEW YORK, January 20.—A Times special from Atlanta, Ga., says: "New disclosures are expected daily in the legal quarrel over prohibition in Atlanta. It is asserted that the liquor men have arranged for an appeal to the United States Supreme Court in error from the State Supreme Court of Georgia, and that Roscoe Conkling is the man who is to take charge of the case from that point on, provided he can be prevailed upon to do so."

FATAL HYDROPHOBIA.

THE MODEST FUNERAL OF LITTLE JOSIE APPLEGATE YESTERDAY.

Sad Scenes at the Home of the Bereaved Family—The Poor Mother's Grief—The Sufferings and Death of the Little Victim—Dr. Van Zandt's Statement.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

NEW YORK, January 20.—Through the rain and sleet of yesterday a modest funeral wound its way through the snow-laden roads and gloomy passes of the Spotswood pines to the quiet Methodist churchyard, where was buried the body of little Joseph Applegate, 6 years old, who died on Sunday afternoon of hydrophobia. The POST-DISPATCH correspondent drove the intervening eleven miles which lie between New Brunswick and the home of the Applegates, through the drenching storm yesterday, and arrived soon after the remains had been placed in a neat walnut casket, pillowed with white flowered satin and resting on a couple of chairs in the dining-room, preparatory to their removal to the Spotswood Church. John Seward Applegate lives two miles from the village of Spotswood, in a small clearing made in the pines. The house is a two-story frame building, void of ornament and evidently not the home of well-to-do people. There was a neatness visible in the interior arrangements which bespoke a careful housewife. In an upper room husband and wife were consoling each other over the loss of their child. There were five other children clinging about the parents, the oldest of whom could not have been more than 8 years, and the youngest was a nurseling babe, which the mother clutched nervously to her breast while tears coursed down her cheeks as she spoke of that other one who lay in the casket on the lower floor. "And they will bear him—my Josie—away soon," she was saying; "and I cannot have the other little ones see him buried. Oh, why did the dog bite my poor boy?"

The husband sat moodily by staring out of a window upon the dismal landscape with lips twitching in bitterness at the thought of it all. He greeted the reporter sadly, but roused himself sufficiently to relate how his son received his injuries and how he died.

"It was on Saturday morning, December 18, that Josie went out on the farm to play, as was his custom after breakfast," he said, "and down by the roadside, just where you saw those stunted cedars as you turned in, a strange dog, a fox terrier, was running by. Josie was near the road and turned to run toward the house when he saw the dog. He was naturally afraid of dogs, and this one was savage in appearance. The animal sprang after him and fastened its teeth in the skin just between the boy's eyes and then ran off. When Josie came into the house he was bleeding and I started out with my gun after the dog. I saw him near the swamp over there and fired. I missed him and he escaped into the brush, but I was near enough to see that there was froth on his jaws, and that his eyes were greenish in color. Then I believed that

MY BOY WAS DOOMED.

We poulticed the wounds as best we could and sent for Dr. E. D. Van Zandt, Jamesburg. I don't know whether he had ever seen a case of hydrophobia before, but he tried to persuade us to forget the matter and follow out the instructions he left. Medicine was given Josie and the wounds healed. We had forgotten all about the dog, when an Thursday my boy began sneezing violently and complained to his mamma of feeling a pain in his forehead. He would not drink water when offered him and howled like a whipped dog when I tried to get him to take the medicine which the doctor left. On Friday he grew worse, sneezing and rubbing his little head. On that night he was wild, crying and kicking as if trying to get away from something which frightened him. I grew sick and faint with watching and when Winfield Sodon, a neighbor, called I asked him to sit beside Josie's bed while I gained some rest. Sodon tells me that while he sat there my boy began talking of his sister Katie and cried: 'Oh Katie, I'm going mad, just like the dog.' Then he drew up his feet, Sodon says, and kicked and barked like a young pup dog. When his uncle, Adam M. Applegate, came to see him that night he barked again, and an hour afterwards told his mother that he had thought of dogs so much of late that he barked so as to scare his uncle, for they were always romping together. On Saturday night, after what we thought a change for the better during the day, he grew very wild, staring with distended eyes out of the window, and repeatedly crying "There's dogs out there." He lived in great agony through that night, and none of us slept a wink. In the morning he was exhausted, and kept staring up at the ceiling. We could see that the seal of death was upon his lips and knew his pain would soon be over. At 4:20 p. m. he died as if he had fallen asleep," and Applegate brushed the tears from his eyes as he concluded the recital.

Down on the lower floor the relatives and friends had assembled to take a last look upon the face of the unfortunate dead. It was evident that there had been a severe struggle with death, for the features of the child were drawn and distorted, while the brow, which bore the marks of the dog's teeth in three darkened scars, was furrowed with the agony which he endured. Half an hour later the coffin lid was closed and the body born out to the waiting sleigh of the undertaker. The funeral services were held in the Spotswood Methodist Church, conducted by Rev. Marshall Owens of Oldbridge. The attending physician, Dr. Van Zandt, was not at the funeral, but was seen later in the day. "I have seen but few cases of rabies," he said, "and I want to see less in the future. There can be no doubt that little Joseph Applegate died of hydrophobia, and no human skill could have saved him. He was a bright and winning little fellow, and I feel deeply for the parents, who thought the world of him. His was the first case of hydrophobia in this section of Middlesex County in many years."

WOMAN'S FICKLENESS.

A Pretty Missouri Girl and Her Two Lovers—The Tobin Bequest

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

LEXINGTON, MO., January 19.—Mr. Henry Shoemaker and Miss Georgia Frazier, both of Dover, a small village in this county, were married here last night. There is a slight bit of romance surrounding the affair, as Miss Frazier was engaged to two gentlemen, the one to whom she was married and the other a Mr. McDougal. Sunday evening Mr. McDougal took his affianced out sleigh-riding. Monday evening she took another sleigh-ride with Mr. Shoemaker and then and there Mr. McDougal was, in common parlance, done up, for the next day Miss Frazier married Mr. Shoemaker, for whose engagement no wedding day had been named, but the time at which Mr. McDougal was to claim her as his bride was on yesterday.

After going through several terms of court, the Catholic Church here is victorious in a contested will case by which it receives half of an estate valued at $40,000, bequeathed it by Illet Tobin, who died in Caldwell County several years ago.

The residence of Mrs. Thomas, the helpless old lady at Waverly, was burned Tuesday. Mrs. Thomas barely escaped with her life. A Mrs. Scribner, an aged widow, who occupied the house with her, also had a narrow escape.

The Cause of Charity.

The following families were reported to be in destitute circumstances by the police this morning: Connie Chapman, colored, and two children, 2006 Biddle street; Harriet Turner, colored, and three children, 2120 Wash street; Kate Akens, colored, and three children, at 2125 Franklin avenue; Thomas Cunningham, wife and three children, 2312 Market street; Widow Anna Burns and three children at 927 Collins street. The Fifth District Police Station was supplied with $2 and a bundle of clothing from John T. Hesser of 3137 Laclede avenue, a lot of bread and potatoes from Mrs. Ault of 2921 Market rtreet, and a quantity of groceries and meat from an unknown lady.

DR. CHARTIER'S SENSATION.

He Explains Maxwell's Confession and Maxwell Explains Him.

Dr. M. E. Chartier delivered a lecture last night before the St. Louis College of Pharmacy on the subject of hydrophobia, and at the close of the lecture criticised the analysis of the contents of Preller's stomach made by Dr. Ludeking, contending that the fact of poisoning could be proved from the contents as there was always a distinguishable difference between cadavoric alkaloids and natural alkaloids, and that the poison would be more likely found in the liver than in the stomach. He also stated that he had received from Maxwell during a visit to him in jail an admission of the fact that he had killed Preller. This statement was rather startling, as no other person has ever been able to obtain a similar admission, nor a confession of any kind from the little Englishman. A POST-DISPATCH reporter called on Dr. Chartier this morning at his office on Locust street. The Doctor is a Frenchman, as his name indicates, and speaks English with a heavy accent, so much so that it is difficult to understand him at times. He explained his theory with regard to the analysis, and then described his conversation with Maxwell. "I have always thought Maxwell guilty, and believed that he would confess it some time," said he. "I went to see him about three months ago and accused him of killing Preller, but he denied it. I went to the hanging last Friday and stood where I knew Maxwell could see me, although I could not see him. I wanted to discover what impression the scene would make on him, but could not get into the Jail that day. I went next morning and had an interview with Maxwell. Mr. Charles A. Meyer was with me. Maxwell said he was somewhat nervous. I asked him if he had seen the hanging the day before and he answered yes. I asked what impression it had made upon him, and he said he thought the proceeding barbaric, that the execution was a butchery and asked me my opinion about Wilson's struggles after the trap fell. I told him for the purpose of exciting him as far as possible that I believed the struggles were evidence of the unfortunate man's consciousness of pain. This answer seemed to increase Maxwell's nervousness. I next told him that I was present at the hanging, and had the pleasure of feeling the dead man's neck, and I added that I thought Wilson deserved the rope in a less degree than he, Maxwell, deserved it. I also said that I would be present at his hanging and take great pleasure in looking for the dislocation in his neck. Then I said to him flatly: 'You can't deny, sir, that you killed Preller. Isn't it so?' He answered nervously, 'Yes.' Then I said: 'The only thing you claim is that you killed him by malpractice, by accident?' He answered: 'Yes.' I told him I supposed that would be his defense and that he expected to get about ten years. His answer to the first part of the suggestion was yes and to the last part he answered that he expected to be acquitted."

MAXWELL'S EXPLANATION.

The reporter next called on Maxwell at the jail. Maxwell said he remembered the visit of somebody like Chartier who had put some questions to him of the kind reported by Dr. Chartier, but he denied absolutely that he had made any admission to him or anybody else either regarding the manner of Preller's death or the plan of his own defense.

"There are a great many things said to me upon this subject," Maxwell continued, "and from the first I have adopted the plan of meeting one interrogative with another, and startling visitors by affecting surprise at the revelations they themselves make. My customary response to each would-be sensational question has been a semi-musical interrogatory yes, which is given a rising inflection that begins in a tone of surprise and ends in a diapason of astonishment. Those are the kind of "yeses" Dr. Chartier got from me, if he got any, and a man needn't be as smart as Dr. Chartier thinks he is to come and see me and go away with a wagon load of confessions and admissions of that kind. I could understand very little of what Dr. Charter said because he knew so little about the English language, and on that account, too, I suppose he failed to understand what I said."

A NEWSPAPER'S TROUBLES.

The Quincy Herald Compositors Strike for Wages Due Them.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

QUINCY, ILL., January 20.—Between 9 and 10 o'clock last night the compositors in the Daily Herald office struck and went out because of the failure of J. H. O'Brien to give a guarantee that they would receive pay for their work. Six weeks ago Messrs. Weaver and Halstead bought the Herald from parties who had foreclosed a mortgage on the property which was given by O'Brien at the time he took the paper, about a year ago. Two weeks ago O'Brien began a suit in replevin against Weaver and Halstead and got possession of the property by giving a bond of $14,000. Certain interested parties have paid a part of the running expenses of the office up to last night, but have now declined to guarantee further pay. The paper was issued this morning by the use of old plates. The Union will hold a meeting this afternoon and sanction the strike. O'Brien threatens to rat the office.

A DISASTROUS SEASON.

Mr. Haverly Sells Out His Interest in the Madison Street Theater.

CHICAGO, January 20.—The members of Haverly's Minstrels were notified yesterday that at the end of two weeks' time their engagement at the little theater on Madison street, will terminate. Mr. Will J. Davis, manager of the theater, says the cause of the closing of the season was due to the purchase of Mr. Haverly's interest in the theater by Mr. James Goldthwaite, who has been officiating as treasurer of the house. "Mr. Goldthwaite," said Mr. Davis, "has not been satisfied with the result of the season and has determined to forego minstrelsy and devote the theatre to some other class of entertainment." It is said that Mr. Haverly's financial interests are in no way affected by this transfer. Other places of amusement, more important than the Minstrel Theater, are known to have suffered so early in the season, which has been, on the whole, a decidedly disastrous one in Chicago.

Crump's Capture.

Thos. Ryan was arrested at 10 o'clock last night by Officer Crump of the Fourth District. Ryan had entered through a window the meat-shop of John Juan, Tenth and Brooklyn streets, and was hiding behind a side of beef when arrested. John Arch, who was near the scene and unable to give a good account of himself, was also arrested by Officer Crump.

TO-MORROW night promises to be a gala night at the Globe Rink when, it is expected, there will be the largest collection of novel costumes ever seen in this city. The POST-DISPATCH will be represented.

"STATIONERY."

PECULIAR ARTICLES THAT COME UNDER THAT HEAD IN CONGRESS.

How Missouri Members Utilized Their Allowance of $125 Last Session—Peculiar Purchases by Well-Known Statesmen—What it Costs to Run the House of Representatives.

Special Correspondence of the POST-DISPATCH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 17.—The report of the Clerk, of the House of Representatives, of expenditures from June 30, 1884, to June 30, 1885, is almost as interesting a document as the report of the Secretary of the Senate. It has just come from the printer's hands. The first fifty pages are devoted to salaries and extra pay of officers and employes. According to the sumary, these salaries for 1885 amouted to $319,531.95. There is also charged up one month's extra pay to employes of the first session of Congress, $37,16.69; and one month's extra pay to officers and employes of the second session of Congress, $37,071.71, and one month's extra pay to discharged employes of the Forty-seventh Congress, $18,233. The newspaper and stationery account shows that nineteen members drew their allowance of $125 in cash. Wm. H. Hatch of Missouri bought $11.03 worth of stationery, and drew $113.97 in cash; A. M. Alexander of Missouri, bought $4.32 worth of stationery and drew $120.68 in cash; A. M. Dockery of Missouri, is charged with $3.18 stationery and $121.82 cash; Jas. N. Burnes, $108.30, stationery, and $16.70 cash; Alex Graves, $7.45 stationery and $117.55 cash; John Cosgrove, $8.64 stationery and $116.36 cash; A. H. Buckner, $22.56 stationery and $102.44 cash; L. H. Davis, $20 stationery and $105 cash; R. W. Fyan, $1.61 stationery and $123.39 cash; Charles H. Morgan, $17.19 stationery and $107.81 cash; Martin L. Clardy, $23.23 stationery and $101.77 cash; R. P. Bland, $10.50 stationery and $114.50 cash; James O. Broadhead, $61.94 stationery and $63.06 cash; John J. O'Neill, $9.89 stationery and $115.11 cash. Evidently most of were satisfied with the official paper and envelopes of the House and with what knives and scissors they could borrow of their neighbors.

The statesman from Illinois, Col. W. R. Morrison, was frugal enough in stationery to satisfy any of his horny-handed constituents. He drew $122.23 of his allowance in cash. Martin Foran, the friend of labor, laid out $55.49 in stationery. John Finerty, the agitator from Chicago, on the contrary only spent $6.28 for stationery and doubtless contributed the remaining $118.72 to the Irish cause. Frank Hurd of Ohio bought $20.75 worth of stationery and drew $104.25 in cash. S. S. Cox, the present Minister to Turkey, was satisfied to do without stationery, and drew his $125 allowance in cash. S. J. Randall bought $13.41 worth of stationery and drew $111.59 cash. John P. Caine, the Mormon delegate, drew $67.94 worth of stationery. Pat Collins of Boston, the Irish Land-Leaguer, drew $86.80 worth of stationery. J. Warren Keifer, Speaker of the Forty-seventh Congress, drew $57.25 worth of stationery. Perry Belmot, the New York millionaire, patronized the stationery room to the extent of $38.96.

TOM OCHILTREE

of Texas went "the whole hog" on stationery, as he does on everything, and used all but $13.06 of his allowance. Frank Hiscock of New York, on the contrary, had $115.02 left at the end of the year. U. S. Holman, the most stringent economist in the House, purchased $46.42 worth of stationery. Speaker Carlisle nearly filled out his stationery allowance, leaving only $7.21 to his credit. The newspaper and stationery account winds up with the record of the payment to Gustavus Sessinghaus of $249.50, stationery allowance for 1882-83, paid March 3, 1885.

CLASSED AS STATIONERY.

Among the article most in demand among members, as shown by the list of purchases in the stationery room, were autograph albums, of which four dozen were purchased at one time and ten dozen at another. A lot of fancy articles purchased November 18, included dressing cases, nail sets, cushions, misses' sets, opera-glasses, etc., evidently for Christmas. In another place is recorded the purchase of one Christmas card $2.40, and various Christmas cards $2. A large number of silver whistles were purchased at one time ranging in price from $2.75 down. One purchase of opera and marine glasses aggregated $568.20. Another purchase, which included clocks, fruit-knives and opera-glasses, amounted to $370.18. Bags, trunks, etc., were purchased to the amount of $133.43. O'Hara, the colored member from North Carolina, had three of the Harpers' publications and the Century charged up to him. One Congressman, probably from the West, supplied himself, through the stationery-room, with "Keim's Etiquette."

Another purchased one "Democratic Party," according to the record, and there were nine copies of "Money and Politics" ordered through the stationery room, the association of names having probably struck an answering chord in the hearts of nine Republican members. "One Congressional Government" is also included in the purchases made. In February there were purchased valentines to the amount of $1.65, and "one valentine ribbon," 50 cents.

Postage stamps for the House cost $295.

THE WASHING OF TOWELS

for the Doorkeeper's department November 1 to December 11, at 50 cents a dozen, cost $112.53. The same service December 11 to January 4, cost $141.08. In February, 1885, towel washing for the Doorkeeper and the bathrooms cost $409.65. The total towel-washing for the year cost $2,353, which at the uniform rate of 50 cents a dozen would make a total of nearly 56,500 towels. The investigation of Lot Wright cost $2,592.45. The burial of Hon. W. A. Duncan $220.20. On March 30, the Sergeant-at-Arms was paid $35 for car tickets used in subpœnaing witnesses before committees and for messengers to the Treasury Department, representing 840 rides; $2.65 was expended for a part subscription to the POST-DISPATCH for the Clerk of the House. The expenses of a chemical examination of the air of the Capitol by Prof. Baird, April 14 were $145.49, including one carriage at $3 and one wagon for seven days, $24.

The clerk is charged during the year with seventeen pairs of scissors and fourteen pairs of shears. He has also entered up against him one corkscrew, $1.01." The doorkeepers charged with twenty-three pairs of scissors and thirty-four steel erasers. The doorkeeper indulged in two corkscrews at 75 cents each and one at $1.10. Of the committees, that on Naval Affairs used the most stationery, calling for a total of $147.40 worth during the year. The Committee on the Revision of the Laws found a corkscrew necessary to the transaction of its business. July 1, 1885, the stationery room had on hand a stock valued at $12,990.90. Newspapers and stationery for the year cost $48,297.79. Altogether the Clerk spent in maintaining and conducting the business of the House, as shown by this report, $512,871.10.

The Pool Lines Decide Against Issuing Passes to Freight Shippers.

PITTSBURG, PA., January 20.—It is understood that the representatives of the Pennsylvania, Baltimore and Ohio, Lake Shore, Lake Erie, New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio and Tuscarawas Valley Roads, who were in session here Monday and Tuesday, with reference to an equitable distribution of iron ore and coke, agreed to hereafter refuse passes on account of freight, with one exception—stock dealers who come in with their cattle will get a return pass home, and no coke, coal, iron ore, manufacturers—in short, no freight shippers, will this year get passes.

The Correction Court.

Judge Noonan to-day tried a servant girl named Eliza Frey, employed at 2401 DeKalb street, on a charge of assaulting Emma Langwitz, another girl employed there. The evidence was to the effect that during a quarrel Eliza lifted a pan of hot water and emptied it over Emma's head, scalding her terribly. She was sent to jail for four months.

John Wilson was sent to jail for four months for stealing a lap robe from W. H. Claggett.

Wm. Sass was sent to jail for fifteen days for stealing a horse blanket from Frank Zurmuellen.

Richard Ricks was held to the Grand Jury for burglarizing John Butts' store, at 2001 Lucas avenue.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

Suing a Railroad for $10,000 Damages—Helping the Firemen's Ball.

In the City Court this morning the case of Samuel Frazer vs. The East St. Louis and Carondelet Railroad, for $10,000 damages for injuries received, was begun. By mutual agreement it was determined to set aside the verdict of $2,500 in Frazer's favor obtained in the Circuit Court at the last session, and in order that an appeal might not again be taken to the Circuit Court, it was also decided that Judge Watts, the Judge of the Circuit Court, should try the case instead of Judge Launtz. The case has already been tried twice, resulting each time in a verdict in Frazer's favor. Frazer was working on the road in March, 1883, and was helping to move some cars up an incline, when the chain or what is knows as the cradle, broke, and struck him with such force on the leg as to knock out a piece of one of his bones. He has been a cripple ever since.

Thieves succeeded in gaining an entrance to the kitchen of Mr. John O. Butler's residence on Eighth street in the Fourth Ward last night and carried off $10 worth of groceries. They also appropriated several of the finest hens in his coop.

Tim O'Brien, an ex-guard at the Chester Penitentiary, whose mental state is such that it has been necessary several times within the past year to place him in a hospital, was taken to the County Farm this morning.

Patrick Shea, one of the St. Louis firemen, came over here yesterday for the purpose of disposing of a few tickets for the firemen's ball and went back with $200 in his pocket. The City Council passed a resolution ordering the City Treasurer to buy 100 tickets.

The parties fighting for the $1,000 reward have taken no further action since the injunction was obtained by Furlong, and it is the opinion that since neither Burke nor Furlong has anything to gain by bringing the matter into the courts a compromise will be effected.

A BOLD ROBBERY.

Four Men Overpower a Chicago Jeweler and Secure Valuable Booty.

CHICAGO, January 20.—A most daring robbery was committed last evening at the jewelry store of Severins Bros., No. 775 West Madison street, this city. Mr. Henry Severins was in the store alone reading an evening paper when four men entered and asked permission to look at the tray of plated lockets. He took the tray out of the show-case and placed it before them, and they began a close inspection of its contents. Shortly after one of the quartette moved toward the end of the case and beckoned Severins to follow him. The young man, thinking that he wanted to inspect some more jewelry, stepped to the end of the case. Before he had time to say a word, he was grasped by the throat and the muzzles of two revolvers were pressed against his head. One of the men threatened to blow out his brains if he uttered a sound. This caution was unnecessary, because the man who had hold of his throat, held on with a grip which nearly strangled him, and he could not have made an outcry if he wanted to do so. While these two were paying their respects to the jeweler, their companions were at work clearing the cases of their store of watches, rings and jewelry. They put everything into a mail bag which one of the men held in his hands. When the men with the bag signalled their companions that they had enough, three of the men hurried out of the store, while the fourth remained to cover their retreat, which he did by keeping his pistol pointed at Severins. Finally, he, too, made good his escape. As soon as Mr. Severins recovered his presence of mind, he ran out and gave the alarm, but when the officers arrived no trace of the thieves could be found, and there is no clew to their identity. Mr. Severins is not sure that he could identify any of them. He says they were not two minutes cleaning out the case, but notwithstanding they took only the most valuable of the contents. The firm's loss is $1,500.

WHITE'S WOE.

The Ex-Comptroller of Milwaukee on Trial for Embezzling City Bonds.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., January 20.—After innumerable delays the trial of ex-Comptroller James S. White on a charge of embezzling eight city bonds of a value of $8,000 has been commenced in the Circuit Court. White was arrested last spring after having hypothecated seven city bonds with the First National Bank of Chicago. Their disappearance was not discovered until the bank forwarded a number of coupons, on which interest was demanded. An examination of the books showed that no such bonds, as the coupons represented, had been issued. This lead to a closer examination, when it was found that eight bonds, which had remained over from an early issue and were supposed to be safely locked in the vault, had disappeared. A comparison of figures showed these bonds were the ones on which the First National Bank of Chicago demanded interest. White's arrest followed. The trial has been put off from time to time until now. The prominent position formerly occupied by White in political, social and business circles in this city has caused great interest in the case.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20.—The Army and Navy German Club of which Gen. Sheridan is President and Admiral Upsher Vice President, held its second annual ball last evening at the National Rifles' Hall. Mrs. Whitney, who was to have received the guests, sent regrets, and Mrs. Schley filled her place, assisted by the wife of Adjutant-General Drum, Mrs. Dolph of Oregon, Mrs. Fall, a niece of Mrs. James K. Polk, while Mrs. Henry Waite, daughter-in-law of the Chief Justice, distributed the favors, which were flowers. Lieutenant Ray led the german. Gen. Sheridan, Gen. Hazen, Gen. Payne, Col. Wilson, Major and Mrs. Lydecker and Lieutenants Duval, Rucker and Ream were prominent among those present from the army circle, while Senators Manderson, Blackburn, Kenna, Cullom and Dolph escorted their wives or daughters to the scene of festivities, Senator Manderson joining in the dancing that preceded the german. Miss Love, one of Miss Cleveland's guests, was also present at the german. Mr. and Mrs. Corning dined quietly with the President and Miss Cleveland Monday evening.

Mrs. Gen. Crook, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Read, has left Washington for Ft. Whipple, Arizona, under the escort of Col. Beaumont, who goes through to Ft. Bowie, on the New Mexican border.

The social teas of yesterday by Mrs. George L. Bradley and Mrs. Franklin Beach were largely attended.

Special interest was attached to the tea given by the wife and daughters of ex-Justice Strong to signalize their return to society, from which they have been two years withdrawn by bereavement. There are no hospitalities here more stately than those in Supreme Court circles, and Justice Strong and family in their spacious home on H street, have been favorite entertainers in the past. Mrs. Strong was assisted in receiving her guests by Misses Mary and Julia Strong, Mrs. Pollock and Mrs. Janin, also by Miss Henry, daughter of Prof. Joseph Henry; Miss Bradley, daughter of Justice Bradley; Miss Randall of Pennsylvania, Miss Cullom of Illinois, and Miss Dawes of Connecticut. Among the prominent people present were a majority of the Supreme Court families, and Mrs. Senator Hawley, with her sister, Miss Field; Mrs. Hunt, widow of ex-Secretary Hunt, who died while Minister to Russia; Mrs. Hoffman, Mrs. Randolph Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. G. Kennedy, Mrs. Dolph, Assistant Attorney-General and Mrs. Maury and Mrs. Coffey. Mrs. Hunt, who still wears mourning, is warmly welcomed back to social life in Washington, which, as the wife of a judicial officer of the Government and afterwards of a Cabinet officer, she did much by her fine tact and courtesy to adorn. She is permanently located in Washington, and her health, which was much broken by the anxieties attending her husband's death, is now quite restored.

Chief Justice and Mrs Waite gave an "at home" last night, the third of their series of Tuesday evenings in January.

A WONDERFUL EXPERIMENT.

Medical Students Shown a Beating Heart, Its Change of Form and Position.

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH.

NEW YORK, January 20.—An experiment was yesterday made at the College of Physicians and Surgeons which, if seen by Mr. Henry Bergh, would doubtless have filled him with indignation. The object of the experiment was to show to the students a beating heart and allow them an opportunity to study its changes of form and position. There were about 500 students gathered in the amphitheater when the lecturer, introducing the experiment, began. Dr. J. G. Curtis was in the pit, dressed in a black silk gown and surrounded with instruments. At a signal a vivisection table was wheeled into the room and to it was bound a calf weighing 174 pounds. It was greeted with a round of applause and responded with a polite snore. The animal was under the influence of an anesthetic and no signs of suffering were visible at any time during the operation.

The Professor made the first incision along the middle line of the neck, and soon exposed the windpipe, into which he made an opening and introduced an L-shaped tube. This tube, when firmly tied into the windpipe, was connected by means of a rubber tube to a large pair of bellows, with which to maintain artificial respiration after the chest was opened. By this means it was possible to open the chest and expose its contents, and still keep the heart beating at a nearly normal rate. The Professor made a long incision in the median line, along the whole length of the breast bone, explaining that a slight deviation from the line would involve the injury of large blood-vessels, the bleeding from which would be very difficult to check. The breast bone was exposed, and, with the aid of a large pair of scissors and ropes and pulleys, the breast wall was opened and pulled apart. This exposed to view the heart and lungs of the animal. The heart was larger than a man's heart, and received a good deal of rough handling while its mechanism was being explained. Then the pulsations began to grow more rapid and feeble, until it flickered out its last beat.

Illustrating St. Louis.

Mr. G. W. Jewell, general agent of the Cincinnati Graphic, is in the city arranging for the publication in his paper, about the second week in February, of a descriptive and illustrated article on St. Louis. The work has sufficiently progressed to enable him to say that the showing will be of unusual attractiveness and interest, not only to St. Louis but to the entire country. The purpose of the article will be to show the business qualifications and residence beauties and advantages of the city, in fact all the better features of the place. Nothing will be spared in the way of workmanship or expense to make the article one of which every citizen will feel proud.

THE COUNCIL'S ACTION.

Consideration of the Gas Question Postponed Until Next Tuesday Night.

Contrary to general expectation, the St. Louis Company's gas bill was not taken up by the City Council last night. Nevertheless, there was an interesting discussion and in the sparring by both sides it was seen how the Council stood with reference to the bill. But two men announced themselves as in favor of taking up and passing the bill at once, and these were Messrs. Bell and Seddon. Each gentleman announced that he would never vote for the water-gas bill until the St. Louis Company's bill had been passed and the price of gas in the territory south of Washington avenue had been reduced to $1.50. Messrs. Devoy, O'Malley, Blakely, Cummings, Frank and Straub made speeches against the passage of the St. Louis Company's bill first. Mr. Frank's was probably the most important because it contained the proposition of Dwight Tredway, printed in yesterday's POST-DISPATCH. Mr. Frank said that the Council should remember that it owed a duty to the people of St. Louis, but, at the same time, it owed a duty to itself and to the Water Gas Company, which had brought about the present crisis in gas affairs and given everybody the pleasing promise of immediate cheap gas. It seemed that some benefit would lay in the bill that was passed first. What this benefit was he did not know, nor could he understand. But, if there were a benefit to be derived from the passage of one bill first, the Water Gas Company should have that benefit. He had a resolution to offer which he thought would result in the doing of justice to both companies. It would provide for the appointment of a committee to wait upon the St. Louis Company and obtain from it an assurance that it would accept the bill as amended by the House. If the acceptance was assured the committee could arrange with the Mayor and the officers of the company to be present at the next meeting of the Council and then the bill could be passed, signed by the Mayor and accepted by the company while the water-gas bill was being passed. Mr. Frank moved that the further consideration of the bill be postponed until Tuesday night next.

Mr. Stone opposed this motion and proceeded to show why he thought there was no necessity for delay. He said he had apprehended that some stockholder of the St. Louis Company might, in case the bill passed the Council, enjoin the company from accepting it, but now he had no such fear as he believed that the action of the President and directors bound the company. He had in company with Messrs. Blakely, Allen and Temple called in the afternoon on the St. Louis Company directors and submitted a proposition to them in in writing. The answer to this proposition had not been received until just before the Council met. The proposition and answer were as follows:

"ST. LOUIS, January 19, 1886.—To the President and Board of Directors of the St. Louis Gaslight Company: GENTLEMEN—Since the date of your communication agreeing to accept the provisions of Council bill No, 94, the House of Delegates have stricken out section 10, and have substituted a new section in lieu thereof as published in this morning's papers. Have you considered the provisions of the substitute? Will your company reaffirm your communication and accept the provisions of Council bill No. 94, as amended by the House of Delegates, provided the Council concurs in the House amendment? Will your company, provided Council bill No. 94 be approved by his Honor the Mayor, furnish gas consumers south of Washington avenue at the rate named in Council bill No. 94, and make the rebate on public lamps, as prescribed in said bill, on and after February 1, 1886? Very respectfully, W. H. STONE."

"JANUARY 19, 1886.—W. H. Stone, Esq., St. Louis: DEAR SIR—At a meeting of the Directors of the St. Louis Gaslight Company, held this day, it was resolved to accept the amendment to the bill, made by the House of Delegates at its last meeting, and to accept the ordinance in its present shape if passed by the Council and approved by the Mayor. Very respectfully, GEORGE W. PASCHALL."

Mr. Stone submitted that he believed this was all the assurance the Council needed to warrant it in passing the bill. The directors could not be enjoined from fixing the price by any stockholder, although the directors could be enjoined from accepting the provisions of the bill.

The discussion became general. The old company was attacked on one side, and the Water Gas Company attacked on the other. Mr. Frank's resolution was offered and defeated, and the Council finally wound up the gas business by resolving to adjourn to next Tuesday evening.

The attendance of outsiders last evening was greater even than that of the evening before in the House. The lobby, the committee-room, the clerk's office, and both wings of the Speaker's desk were crowded with men. The proceedings lasted from 7 until 9.

Wilbor's Compound of Pure Cod-Liver Oil and LIME. The advantage of this compound over the plain oil is, that the nauseating taste of the Oil is removed, and the whole rendered palatable. The offensive taste of the Oil has long acted as a great objection to its use; but in this form the trouble is obviated. A host of certificates might be given here to testify to the excellence and success of "Wilbor's Cod-Liver Oil and Lime;" but the fact that it is prescribed by the medical faculty is sufficient. Because a Plaster is Porous it is not necessarily good. There is no essential curative power in the holes, or pores. They make the plaster more flexible and adhesive—that is all. Most porous plasters are of no value whatever except as a mechanical support. The only one which possesses actual and positive medicinal and healing properties is Benson's Capcine Plaster. This well-known article is a marked and conceded improvement on all other external remedies. It is prompt to act, giving relief almost as soon as applied. So-called "Capsicin" or "Capsicum" Plasters are worthless imitations of the genuine.
